A FIRST-CLASS SHOW.

Other People's Money is not only one of the cleverest comedies which have been presented at the Opera House, but it is put on by a company of which every member is thoroughly competent in his or her particular line. The dialogue is crisp and original with more fun of a really clever nature than is contained in most pieces, and the gradual development of the story brings out some very amusing situations. The story is of a rich and self-satisfied stockbroker who, in attempting to direct his clerk in a matrimonial scheme, perfects and carries out a plan of which he himself is the victim.

James R. Waite and Walter B. Woodall do the best work, the former as the stockbroker and the latter as his clerk. Mr. Woodall's description of the bull fight brought down the house, while Mr. Waite gained much applause for his oration on money. The former is an old favorite in St. John, while this is Mr. Waite's first visit here.

Seth Smith, as Marcellus Clump, was good and carried his part consistently throughout the piece. Walter Poulter, as the negro servant, was also well up to the mark. General Frank appeared for only a moment and had very little to do.

Of the ladies, it can be said that all three filled their respective roles admirably and seemed particularly suited for the parts they played. Miss Norton, as Hopper's wife; Miss Fenton, as the daughter; and Miss Dornier, as the beaming would-be investor, were accorded much deserved applause.

The piece will be repeated this evening and should have a crowded house.

A meeting of the Trades and Labor Council was held last night in Labor Hall. The president, C. McCristall, secretary, C. H. Stevens and C. H. Laughlin were appointed delegates to the convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, which meets next Tuesday at Brockville, Ont. They will leave on Saturday night. P. C. Sharkey will attend as the freight handlers' special representative.

THE ST. JOHN STAR is published by THE SUN PRINTING COMPANY (LTD.), at St. John, New Brunswick, every afternoon (except Sunday) at $5.00 a year.

RESIGNATIONS—AND A MORAL.

While Mr. Chamberlain's resignation, by depriving the British government of its strongest member, may ensure its defeat at the next election, both he and the government must be strengthened in the esteem of all fair-minded people by their action in this matter.

The whole thing is unprecedented in political history. Leaving the government, Mr. Chamberlain endorses its policy as the most expedient and the best calculated to effect that fiscal reform so greatly needed by Britain. He recognizes that the British public, while ready for a discussion of the respective merits of protection and free trade as affecting their own industries, are yet unprepared to fairly consider the larger proposition of intercolonial preference, which includes a tax on their food stuffs. But believing in the necessity of that scheme for the closer union of the empire, and feeling that he can act with greater freedom as the proponent of that policy unhampered by the constitutional obligations of a cabinet minister, he steps away from official honor and emoluments and devotes himself, as an independent, to the preaching of those principles upon which he knows the empire's permanence depends. His loyalty to his government remains and his support as an independent is pledged to it.

Mr. Balfour also emerges from the difficulty, increased in personal strength. Nobody knows better than he what the loss of Chamberlain means to the administration. But, as a practical politician, he sees that the government, if it adopts Chamberlain's proposals as a whole, will not only do the scheme no good, but by incurring disastrous and certain defeat, will set back its realization for many years. He does not wish a verdict on that question at present, and instead of asking Mr. Chamberlain to smother his principles for the sake of party allegiance—as Laurier did with Blair—he recognizes the sincerity of his purpose and sends him on his independent way with a hearty God-speed.

Such things cannot but make for better ideals in political life. With what regret we should admit that their like is impossible in Canada at present. During this last session of parliament two Canadian cabinet ministers have separated from the government in matters of policy, each perhaps as sincere as Mr. Chamberlain. But in each case the resignation only took place after the minister had refused, at the peril of his political life, to choke his conscience and follow the party as blindly as his colleagues, and each has been followed from office by the abuse and slander of his former friends.

If anything can make up to a government for the loss of its strongest members in a crisis, the Balfour administration has done that thing. The Laurier government has done exactly the opposite.

ONE-SIDED WAR.

While condemning Premier Balfour's protection proposals, the free trade Montreal Witness takes occasion to bid a sad farewell to the greatness of Britain. It admits that Britain's commercial supremacy is waning, but contends that it is in spite of free trade and because the resources of the country admit of no further development. Finding a deadly peril in Mr. Balfour's remedy, it can substitute no other, save a philosophic recommendation, between the lines, to the Britisher who is losing ground to submit as peacefully as possible, knowing that, as free trade did not save him, nothing can.

"It is no doubt true," says the Witness, "that Britain is not forging ahead of all other countries at the rate she once did. That was to be expected. There is an end to possibilities. A colt cannot possibly grow as big as an elephant; neither can a couple of he-bears little islands compete forever with fertile continents. Britain was once supreme largely because she was the producer of iron for the world. If she can no longer compete with the United States in that, as she is beginning to think, there is no meaning in that matter. The thing which has protracted her supremacy so long is that she has maintained free trade while the United States has shackled her commerce with purposely obstructive burdens."

These blind who will not see! The United States has shackled her commerce," says the Witness, when the United States in the past quarter of a century has grown in commercial prosperity as no other country ever grew, almost wholly because of the protection "shackles." Immense resources she had, but without some guard against the slaughtering competition of older countries the developers of these resources could have made no such progress. If Britain finds today that she can no longer compete with the States in iron, it is not because she has not the ore, nor the mills nor the men to manage them, but simply because the ability of the United States manufacturer to sell his products at a high price behind his own tariff wall enables him to sell at slaughter prices outside that wall to the tremendous disadvantage of the British manufacturer, who is as open to competition in his home market as anywhere else.

"What good will it do John Bull to take this tariff club and go a-fighting in a tariff war?" asks the Witness.

Because the war is now on and John Bull is helpless to defend himself. The war is not of his making. Fifty years ago he threw away his tariff weapons, hoping his competitors would do the same. But instead they have persistently increased the size and weight of their own until poor John's commercial life is being well high cudgelled out of him. The others will not throw their arms; why should not he close his fingers upon the club that is offered him and try his strength against theirs under fair conditions?

These "half-bred little islands" breed men that with protection and without it, have by energy and pluck and business sense fought themselves into the foremost commercial position. Now that their supremacy is threatened by unfair attacks, a chance is offered them to equalize themselves with their competitors. But they are a stubborn people, with a reputation of not knowing when they are beaten, and it is possible that they will prefer to fight barbed yet-a-while. Under present conditions, however, they are bound to keep on losing, and as they are a resisting rather than a philosophical people, they will reach for that club before very long. And, with it, they will win again.

"British liberals apparently have before them an opportunity sufficiently attractive and well calculated to unite all factions."

The above, from the editorial columns of the Telegraph this morning, judges British liberals by that wavering journal's own standard. That the prospect of power should cause all members of that party to smother conscience and principle for the sake of personal advantage seems a very natural and proper thing to the Telegraph.

O EXPLANATION.

One of the government organs thinks that however strongly Mr. Blair felt on the subject of the Grand Trunk Pacific he was not called upon to do more than to make a speech on the second reading and to record his vote against it. With that formal and perfunctory opposition a government could have its own way and be always happy. The application of this doctrine would make the committee stage superfluous and third readings an absurdity. Amendments to government measures would become impossible and the discussion of the question in detail would not take place. Mr. Blair's silence cannot be explained by the suggestion that he has done all he possibly could to prevent the passage of the measure in its worst form. Some other explanation will be given later.

HER CONSTANCY.

(Edgar Fawcett in The Reader.)

Time teaches, they told her, to forget. Ah, fatuous phrase! For her time only seems.

A subtle and cruel sculptor, who redeems

With stealthy chisel his dead form even yet

From the stern marble of her dumb regret—

Enstatuing him until the lost shape gleams

More spellbound on substance than on dream.

Though bastioned still by death's pale parapet.

So in his visible presence doth she dwell

Fearful, as months like centuries out-roll,

That the too vital portraiture might fret

Grief to delirium, and disfigure the spell

Of resignation. . . . Thus her sorrowing soul

Time teaches to remember, not forget!

CAMP SUSSEX.

SUSSEX, Sept. 17.—Today's storm put a temporary stop to things. About one o'clock, however, the sky cleared, and the sun came out strong and warm.

The first of the series of lectures on topography was delivered today to the regiment officers. A slight accident yesterday to a trooper of the 8th Hussars gave the medical corps its first opportunity for practical service. There are estimated to be 1,925 men in camp, a much smaller number than was expected. Last evening General Dundonald entertained to dinner several officers, including D. O. C. Col. White, the A. A. G., Col. Vince, and the P. M. O., Major Bridges. Tomorrow the Brighton Engineers will probably be put to work on a wing dam to prevent the river making further encroachments on the camp grounds.

A sing-song will be held on the 18th instant. Prizes of $7, $5 and $3 will be awarded to performers who are judged to be the best, second and third.

On the 18th the engineers and infantry of the brigade will be instructed in skirmishing, half-musketry and half skirmishing.

BIG CROWD WANTED CHOICE SEATS.

There was a large crowd in attendance at Gray's bookstore today, despite the inclement weather, to mark off seats for the Music Festival on Friday and Saturday afternoon and evenings of next week. It was a reservation of seats for those who subscribed to the funds of the festival months ago. The public sale will commence on Monday. Interest in the festival was never so great and the most marked success of anything yet attempted here in the line of musical entertainment is practically assured.

PLUCK AND STRENGTH.

On Monday last Thomas Ryan, formerly of this city, and Edward Arnett of P. E. Island were selling on Moose Head Lake near Greenville, Me., with two young ladies. When some distance from the shore the boat sank and left the four struggling in the water. In spite of the burden of wet clothes the men struck out manfully for the shore and by great pluck and endurance saved all four lives.

LOCAL NEWS.

The tug Flushing, Capt. Farris, which has been held up for quite a time receiving a new condenser, came down to the harbor yesterday afternoon. As soon as the weather clears up the Flushing will take two barges up to Parrsboro.

We were pleased today to have a call from Mark Sanderson, of Leith, Scotland, a member of the well-known firm of Robertson, Sanderson & Co., Ltd., distillers, who will remain in the city for a few days. Mr. Sanderson was with the Scottish curlers, and the friends he made on that occasion are delighted to see him; and he expresses himself as more than pleased with Canada in summer.—Acadian Recorder.

Wednesday's Boston Herald says:—"Manager Armour, of the Cleveland Club, American League, who arrived in Boston yesterday, said he would not sign Catcher McLean, of the Nashua Club, as he had ascertained that the player had agreed to go to the Chicago Nationals and that the president of the Nashua Club had accepted the offer of Manager Selee for that player. The Cleveland club is through, so far as Mr. McLean is concerned."

Wm. Dugan, the well known oarsman, sustained an injury to his hand this morning, which will prevent him from taking part in the race for the Glassey cup or competing at the Cleveland regatta. He was opening a bottle when it burst and a piece of the glass entered his hand, cutting it severely.—Halifax Mail.

"LOST PARADISE" MONDAY.

The great labor play "Lost Paradise" will be the opening production of Daniel Ryan's engagement, which opens on Monday night for one week only. In this play, Mr. Ryan will play his famous character of "Reuben Warner," and it is said he is at his best in this part. Miss Daisy Lee Whipple, the new leading lady of the Ryan Company, is said to be a most charming woman and an actress of undoubted ability. Many new faces will be seen in this company this season. The sale of seats is progressing nicely.

WOIRHY A BIG RECEPTION.

St. John people will have a chance of showing their appreciation in possessing such a singer as Harry H. McClaskey, by turning out in force at the Opera House on the evening of Sept. 30th and Oct. 1st. Those who have heard Mr. McClaskey since his last appearance here have been delighted with the improvement shown in his voice from study and practice. A delightful surprise for those who attend the above concert, Mrs. De Moss, soprano, and Julian Walker, basso, will be heard in duets and trios with Mr. McClaskey.

Plan opens next Thursday at Opera House box office.

PROVINCIAL WEDDINGS.

Connick-Cunningham.

ST. STEPHEN, N. B., Sept. 16.—Henry Connick, the popular messenger for the American Express Company at St. John, was married to Mrs. Cunningham today. They will reside in St. Stephen.

McLaughlin-Rideout.

GRAND FALLS, N. B., Sept. 14.—A very interesting event occurred at Grand Falls, N. B., Wednesday, Sept. 14th, when Rev. M. A. O'Keefe, united in marriage Miss Della Rideout to Joseph McLaughlin, both of that place. Goldsmith-Williams.

ANNAPOLIS, N. S., Sept. 17.—A quiet home wedding took place on Wednesday morning at the residence of Benjamin Williams, Moschelle, when his youngest daughter, May, and Vernon Goldsmith, of Perotte, were united.

At 8 o'clock Fred Daley, of the staff of the Sydney Hotel, formerly of St. John, N. B., was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Stone, of Sydney, the ceremony being performed Tuesday morning by Rev. Charles Brady, assistant pastor of Sacred Heart parish, Sydney, C. B.

Bryant-Blair.

TRURO, N. S., Sept. 17.—The marriage took place this evening at Blenkins Hill, of Sara Lillian Blair, daughter of Col. William Blair, a leading agriculturist, to Arthur Warren Bryant, of Princeton, Ill. They will spend six weeks travelling and then settle in Illinois.

THE CHATHAM EXHIBITION.

As the date of the Chatham exhibition approaches interest in the fair steadily increases. Provincial fairs are already securing floor space in the exhibition building, and live stock entries are being received. The management is arranging for special attractions on the grounds, and everything indicates that the "three days" fair will be a big success. The horse races on the new track on the last two days of the exhibition, Sept. 20th and Oct. 1st, will be even more interesting than those held on Labor Day. A large attendance from outside points is certain, and those who intend visiting the exhibition will do well to make early application for hotel accommodation. Make a note of the dates—Sept. 29, 30 and Oct. 1.

RACE ACROSS SEA.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Robert E. Tod, commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club, at a dinner given for him last night by members of the club aroused considerable enthusiasm when he announced that for years it had been his ambition to bring about a transatlantic race for sailing ships.

"The race," he said, "should be from Sandy Hook to the Azores, and if it cannot be sailed next year certainly we should be able to arrange for it the year after. We have just had a five hundred mile sailing race, and why not one across the Atlantic?"

"It has been done before and should be done again. We have several members of this club who are prepared to sail this race in any weather, and we are ready to begin preparations this minute."

His speech was a surprise to the members, but was received with loud applause and assurances that the members were ready to participate in such a race.

The commodore was made the recipient of a loving cup, presented largely as a testimonial for his efforts in entertaining Sir Thomas Lipton.

There is no truth whatever in the report the papers are publishing that Lieut.-Governor Snowball, Mrs. and Miss Snowball are going to visit Vancouver a few days ago and the whole story was probably suggested by that fact.—Miramichi Advance.

BROTHER BLEW BROTHER.

PLEASANTVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—When Mrs. Springsteel died, a short time ago, she left her $10,000 house to her son Jack. This is why Jack Springsteel was shot to death by his brother, Willett, tonight.

The tragedy occurred at their home, in Bedford road, near here. Willett returned about half-past eight o'clock. He had been drinking, and at once began a tirade against his brother. He was jealous.

His father and sister locked him in a room and left the house. Jack remained alone. Suddenly there was a shot and a bullet crashed through the door and into the breast of the brother on guard. He died in three minutes.

Willett Springsteel, when arrested, confessed.

ANOTHER STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Following Wednesday's hurricane came another severe storm today. In New York the wind blew at the rate of 67 miles an hour, which was stronger than yesterday's gale. The damage was not so widespread, however, because the storm did not last so long.

Fishing schooners that arrived today brought tales of disasters from all along the coast. At least half a dozen men were drowned from these boats and it is feared that many more met a similar fate. Several schooners are missing, some of which are known to have foundered. Five smacks are yet to be heard from.

Among the men drowned were Captain John G. Morgan and fisherman Ned Egan, of the sch. M. A. Easton, and Captain Silas Latham and fisherman Peter Barr and Lewis Wilcox of the sch. Esther and Anita.

KISSED DYING SON.

NOW FEARS RABIES.

Boy Died of Hydrophobia and in Spasm of Pain Slightly Scratched His Father's Cheek.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Andrew Marks, a farmer, of Northumberland, Pa., and Selim, his son, twenty-six years old, have come to Pasture Institute in this city to be treated as a precaution against hydrophobia.

The father is afraid he was infected by kissing another son, who died of hydrophobia on July 2, and Selim by contact with an instrument that had been used on his brother.

The dead son, Andrew, was bitten by strange dog that had wandered into his father's yard on June 21. The dog was killed and the wound it inflicted, cauterized. A suggestion that the dead animal be examined to determine if it were really rabid was not heeded, and the boy had merely casual attention until hydrophobia virulently manifested itself three days later. He died after great suffering on July 2.

When it became evident that the boy could not live the father, beside himself with grief, caught his son in his arms and kissed him repeatedly. During one of the spasms of pain the boy bit the father's cheek slightly. The father paid no attention to this until some time after the funeral of his son, and then reflection made him fear that he, too, might have been poisoned by the virus. His son Selim at the same time found that he had in dressing a cut on his leg used a syringe that had been also used on the brother who had died of hydrophobia, and had never after been properly sterilized.
