LEADING THE LIFE OF A NOMAD
IN A CARAVAN IS THE LATEST
FAD OF BRITISH ARISTOCRATS

Spending the Holiday on Wheels, Seeing the Natural Beauties of the Country and Getting Into Closer Touch with Nature and the Simple Life are Now Attractions.

"It'd be a gypsy, merry and free,
"A gypsy's life is the life for me."

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Life in a caravan has become the fad of the hour, and now scores, if not hundreds, of families have deserted town to share the experiences of the gypsy tribes who wander restlessly over the length and breadth of the land. Lady William Grosvenor, sister-in-law of England's richest peer, the Duke of Westminster, set the example, and now her followers in this new fad are increasing daily.

There is a certain class whose sole ambition in their annual holiday is to break the many habits of their life and explore some unusual phase of existence. These are the yachtsmen, the campers and the caravanners. It must be admitted that the caravanner, although he, too, has something within him of the explorer and the pioneer, is in comparison with the others, no daring adventurer and has no need to make his life before he starts.

LIFE OF A NOMAD.

Whereas other people make a journey to reach a certain destination, and, indeed, regard the journey as a necessary evil, the caravanner—having no destination to reach—goes out to make a journey solely for the sake of travelling.

The day's march, on the one hand, and the camp, on the other, are his two great interests; and, if he takes the road with a genial spirit and an open mind, he will find life full of pleasant episodes and memorable scenes.

For all he does is set in a picturesque and romantic setting. He will have a new sympathy for his fellow-vagabond—the tramp under the hedge or the circus proprietor—the man who carries a wagon—and for all he meets upon the common road. And he will even find himself upon a new and intimate footing with the bird that patterns on the roof at dawn, or the cow that rubs against the shafts, while his horse is a comrade-in-arms well worthy of his friendship.

This fascinating nomad life on the open road is so simple, so healthy, so close a rest for wearied brains, so complete a change from the weary monotony of business, that it appeals to everybody, and as he is dying to become a sort of nomadic institution.

THE CARAVAN.

The literature of the caravan is by no means insignificant, and the daily papers display stories written by those who have enjoyed the delights of the road. One of these, Bertram Smith, writes as follows about the nomadic life:

"It is, in my estimation, of the greatest importance to have your caravan as light as possible, and easily drawn by one horse, not for the sake of making record journeys, but to make sporting matches possible. It is also important in these days to see roads, as far as may be, where the motor cannot follow, with its hideous clouds of dust. There should be at least two rooms inside, with light wooden partitions and curtains between, and every corner must be occupied with folding chairs and tables, a cabinet washstand, hanging cupboards and racks. Everything that will collapse must be collapsible, with the exception of the beds, for the caravanner is a tired man when evening comes, and in no good case to wrestle with ingenious devices and fight his way to repose. I strongly recommend a sound rubber mat, a rubber bath, candle brackets on the walls, a cork carpet for the floor and beds with spring mattresses, one above another, like bunks in a cabin. The door should be in front and the beds at the far end. There should be plenty of windows that will open, and curtains are much better, warmer and more artistic than blinds. A ladder, boxes and hooks for buckets should be slung below the floor.

A GOOD DEAL OF WALKING.

"When on the road the caravanner will, of course, walk for the greater part of the way; and he should, from the very beginning, cultivate a contentment for weather if he would have a perfect peace of mind. He may 'change' as soon as he comes to camp, and need have no cause to go out again, so no ordinary rain should keep him back. A suit of oilskins will be found most useful for foraging on wet evenings. Short marches are the best—some ten or fifteen miles a day; for a caravan does not pretend to be a rapid mode of transit.

"The horse should be a strong dry-horse, not too heavy, and capable of trotting when roads are good or the way lies down hill. There is no need to carry a large store of provisions, as one can as a rule, live handsomely off the country.

"The caravanner will soon pass under the influence of the beneficent spirit of the road, and will come to love his hobnob for his charmy, and respect it for its antiquity; for, long before the days of bricks and mortar, the world was full of caravanners. It is no new mode of life, but the oldest of all. The real innovators are not the caravanners, but those who live in houses, shorn of wheels."

SALUTING GEN. BOOTH

OLD MAN FALLS DEAD

Pathetic Incident Marks the Tour of Aged Salvation Army Chieftain.

MANCHESTER, Aug. 3.—As General Booth, who is on a tour of the north of England, was about to enter a church at St. Neots, Herts, yesterday to speak, William Ibbett, aged 82, a retired merchant, fell dead on the church steps.

Mr. Ibbett had for many weeks been looking forward to General Booth's visit. "I'm thankful I have lived to this day," he said when the crowd, seeing General Booth approaching in his motor car, shouted, "Here he comes!" As General Booth approached the steps Mr. Ibbett raised his hat as a salute, and in doing so fell to the ground. He was carried into the churchyard, and as he was dying muttered, "My sight is going; I cannot see the general."

"God has summoned this old comrade of mine at noon today," said General Booth, addressing the spectators. "It makes me question if I should be called tonight. I also am getting old, but I trust when the summons comes, I, too, will have my hand raised at the salute, and will be prepared."

"My father had been preparing for a long time to meet General Booth," said Miss Elizabeth Ibbett, subsequently. "Since his retirement from business he has spent much time and money helping the Salvation Army. He would go from town to town, giving where it was most needed."

Three of Mr. Ibbett's brothers had met death. Joseph fell dead at 23 while entering a bank, Henry, did at 51, and Thomas at 77. Two aged sisters also dropped dead.

NAVAL OFFICER LOST

IN AUSTRALIAN BUSH

Wanders Aimlessly About for Four Days Suffering From Want of Food and Water.

MELBOURNE, Aug. 3.—A thrilling story of the privations endured by Engineer Commander Ethelbert Silk, of the cruiser Pyramus, who was lost for five days in the bush near Port Darwin, is told in the papers today.

The Pyramus had conveyed Lord Northcote, the governor general, and party to Port Darwin on a tour of inspection. Commander Silk landed with a shooting party, but afterward the commander went alone to search for game. When it was known on the Pyramus that he was missing the vessel's searchlight was displayed at night, so as to act as a guide for him. When dusk set in he found himself hopelessly lost in some mangroves. He obtained some water from a swamp, and during the next two days he continued to wander about.

His position grew more desperate, for besides having had no food, he could not find any water. On the night of the third day rain fell in torrents, and Commander Silk spread his clothes out on the ground and squeezed the water into his mouth.

At night he saw the searchlight of the Pyramus, but was unable to go in its direction owing to a wide river, fringed with mangroves swamps, blocking his way.

It was not until the fourth day that he met two black natives, who took him into a canoe, which they pushed across the river, one swimming on either side. They first took him to their house, gave him nourishment, and next day they drove him into Port Darwin.

SEEING LONDON TOWN BY MOTOR OMNIBUS
Day's Non-Stop Ride Discloses all Scenes of Interest in English Capital.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—An entertaining motor reliability test was made in London yesterday, when for eight hours without a break a Buick car was driven hither and thither among the traffic.

The car occasionally pulled up to change passengers, and was frequently stopped by the congestion of traffic. The driver, however, kept his seat, and the engine would have run continuously for twelve hours but for an unfortunate accident about 5 p. m.

American visitors to London who really wish to see the town cannot do better than have such a twelve-hour non-stop run as had been arranged yesterday.

They will travel at about a steady eight miles an hour, with a gentle spurt here and there, to make up 100 miles in the day. They will absorb London, from the Bank to Shepherd's Bush. They will see everything that is to be seen without trouble, and by taking their meals "on board" will spend a "rest cure" day in the heart of London, with a continual change of scenery.

The car, in order to cover a hundred miles of London streets, has to exploit many queer places unheard of by the ordinary visitors and unknown even to town residents.

A run down Piccadilly yesterday yielded a snapshot of Sir Charles Wyndham thinking out a new character in a handsome cab, and of Ramsey MacDonald, M. P., looking like a member of the government, crossing Trafalgar Square with leather satchel.

And so the car pursued its endless round, until a heavy van dashing out of a side street near Waterloo, the engine was stopped by the too-sudden application of the brakes.

Surprised THE GHOST.
A ghost, a vague white form which flitted about a small neglected graveyard in Galloway, much to the alarm of those who lived near by, one of the gardeners of our party undertook to lay. Going out not far from midnight he did indeed soon become aware of a white figure looming toward him through the darkness. Our friend, however, held on his way undeterred.

"Ghost," he said in sepulchral tones. When he came near, "could you drink a glass of brandy?"

"I could so, your honor," blithely responded the ghost, taken off his balance by the unexpected offer, and standing revealed as the principal preacher of the neighborhood, who had availed himself of this spectral guise to set his night lines and carry on his other deceptions undisturbed.

FRANCE AUGMENTS HER AERIAL FLEET
Dirigible Balloons to be Placed at Strategic Points Along Her Frontiers.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—The success of the dirigible balloons "Lebaudy" last year, and of the "Patrie," which concluded its trial last week, has caused the government to augment its aerial fleet.

Several new dirigibles on the model of the "Patrie" are being constructed forthwith, and M. Julliot, the engineer of Messrs. Lebaudy Brothers, and designer of the "Patrie," counts upon introducing many improvements in the new airship. The principal strategic points on the eastern frontier, such as Poul, Epinal, Verdun, and Belfort, will be supplied with airships as soon as they can be launched.

The "Lebaudy" and "Patrie" are at present at the balloon park at Monden, but the latter is to be stationed at Verdun and would have begun its journey thither today had the conditions been favorable.

A sum of $60,000 now remains on the estimate for the building of the new ship, but the military commission is to ask Parliament for a fresh credit. Although the "Lebaudy" was purchased for $20,000, the "Patrie" cost $10,000, this is to be the sum paid for the additional ships.

M. Julliot is certain that the "Patrie" and airships of her class will play an important part in the land war of the future. They would, he points out, be of inestimable value to the commander of a besieged garrison. It is next to impossible for artillery to hit a spherical-shaped mass 50 meters long traveling 40 kilometers an hour at an altitude of 1,000 meters.
