AN AUTHORITY ON INDIAN LANGUAGE.

Very Rev. M. C. O'Brien, Rector of St Mary's, Bangor, Master of a Most Difficult Tongue

His Valuable Library - Scholarly Priest Recogniz d as Highest Authority on Abenaki History and Language.

The Very Rev. Fr. Michael Charles

O'Brien, rector of St. Mary's Catholic

Church, Bangor, is the cwner of an exceedingly curious as well as important library, which is by far the largest private library on Indian dialects and books printed in the various Indian languages, possessed by any stu-dent in Maine, if not in New England. Having been sent as a priest to the Penobscot Indians, inhabiting Indian Island in Oldtown, in 1877, Fr. O'Brien soon found that it was necessary for him to know their language in order to properly perform his religious administrations among them. Consequently, with the consent of the town authorities, he was appointed a teacher of the public school, and there commenced his study of the native language from intercourse with the child-He would ask them the names of all common objects in their own language, and would make notes of every word and definition given. This same method was followed with the older people of the village, and continued during his residence among them. The result was a large mass of the most original notes upon the language of the Penobscots. These notes fill numerous note books of different sizes, numbering in all more than a dozen and together embrace hundreds

It was from this study and the vast mass of notes and facts gathered that Fr. O'Brien became interested in the ancient language of the Abenaki-the original language of Maine—and was led to prepare for the Maine Historical Society, his treatise on etymology of society, his treatise on etymology of the Abenaki noun.

The publication of this treatise in 1887, at once won a justly merited distinction for its author. He was elected a member of the society, and his studies in Indianology gave him the recognition of other learned societies, and individual students of the Indian language. He became a correspondent with them, authors sent him copies of their writings, and he commenced to collect, in a modest way, works relating to the Indians of many parts of the country, until at present he is the owner of a valuable collection.

Very naturally the first and by far the most important book in the Indian collection of Fr. O'Brien, and one upon which he based his studies of the Indian language is the "Dictionary of the Abenaki language in North America," by Rev. Sebastin Rasle, S. J., which was found after the fight at Norridgewock, Aug. 12, 1724, in which Fr. Rasle was killed by the English. The M. S. was found in a "strong box" among other papers belonging to Fr. Rasle, and is now one of the treasures to long idea many clerk of the sate of long life lies in getting to the the secret of long life lies in getting to the the secret of long life lies in getting to the the secret of long life lies in getting to the the secret of long life lies in getting to the the secret of long life lies in getting to be times and breathing fresh forest air.

A choice little volume by Samuel Lane Boardman entitled, "Six Private Libraries of Bangor, Maine," states that such provision has been made regarding Fr. KING ON CONTINENT How His Majesty Passed His Time and brightness of blue uniformed omcers and soldiers.

(London Express.) Royal life amid the oak and beech forests of Fredensborg touches lightly upon the ideal; it is quiet, domestic, and blissful. Down in the English-looking village—not far from the castle—a queer semi-military atmosphere pervades. The stolid peasant forms a check, as it were, upon the pageant brightness of blue uniformed officers and soldiers.

But up at the snow-white castle, where King Edward and Queen Alexandra have come to stay, things are different. The outer world is blocked from both sight and senses, and the royal life is that of a country house rather than of a king's dwelling.

Early rising is a feature of the Danish court. Visitors at Fredensborg are usually astir long before the workaday world shakes off the slumber of the night before. It is no unusual thing to meet the aged King of Denmark coming back from a walk or a ride about 7 o'clock in the morning; and his relatives and visitors take pleasure in following closely the bluff old monarch's example.

STREET SIGNS IN MOSCOW. Painted Reproductions of the Goods Sold Within the Shops.

There is one custom in St. Petersburg, holding all over Russia, so droll that all foreigners laugh at it. The shopholders have huge signs over the miserable peepholes they call windows. and these signs are painted with the reproduction of the wares that are in the shops. This was formerly a great convenience to those who could not ead, and even at the present day was not too much ridiculed by myself. One would get along famously in Russia could he read the jaw breaking tongue, but the letters in some fronts and street corners look like the signs of the zodiac to the average foreigner and do not mean as much. If one could read and form an idea of syllables, the veriest idiot would have a passable knowledge of sufficient travelling Russia in a month. But the language bars you out and bowls you over, because perforce you do not know the fifty-two letters that resemble tripods and crescents and scarfpins and inverted r's and other things

So the signs do very well. For example, a dairy will have demonstration on each side of the loor, where a cow will stand, flanked by a couple of tubs of butter and leaning against a background of cheeses while glasses of foaming milk stand temptingly round. I was going to say that a pile of eggs was another feature, but never unless the hen who is responsible for them is portrayed loudly clucking over their freshness. spite of this, I never ate a fresh egg in St. Petersburug. A fur shop will have a most fascinating array of fur lined garments and sealskin coats painted on its doors that will almost sia or anywhere else. good old general was unquestionably an unfortunate and much-abused man, but there is no proof that he begged his living at the city gates or elsewhere. Yet, Van Dyke engraved him, and David, the great Frenchman, painted him, and tragedies and ro-mances were written around him in the belief that he did sit at the city gates a forlorn and disconsolate object with palm outstretched for alms. water.

The facts are that a conspiracy against the Emperor Justinian being discovered, two of Belisarius's officers confessed under torture that the old general was in the plot. He was condemned without further hearing, his property sequestrated, and he suffered prisonment for six months. His innocence being established, Belisarius year later. But that he ever was reduced to the extremity of begging is declared to be absolutely untrue. The school book tale of William Tell is also without foundation in fact. Tell's name doesn't even appear in the chronicles of Zurich, and the most ancient writing in which the story mentioned bears date some 200 years after the event it pretends to describe. The story is a variation of an old
