REMEMBER THE FATHER AND SON ENLIST MEETING IN QUEEN'S RINK

Tonight men of Military ages are wanted to enlist
—Follow the band.

Male St. John is patriotically invited to Queen's rink tonight.

Another big meeting is to be held in the interests of the 104th Battalion. It is most gratifying to state that within the short compass of a little more than a week, a large body of stalwart Canadian sons have been organized in defence of home and flag.

Lieut. Col. Fowler's regiment is awaiting the finishing touches. It is confidently expected that tonight's monster rally will accomplish this final work and give a generous overflow as a nucleus to still another battalion of patriots.

Band parades will start at the Haymarket Square, from the centre of Carleton, the Armory in South End and the corner of Douglas Avenue and Main streets in the vicinity of 7:30 o'clock, so that the processions of men and youths will reach Queen's rink shortly before 8 o'clock at which hour Chairman E. A. Schofield will bring the gathering to order.

Every man and youth of eligible age in the city will be expected to lend his assistance in making the meeting tonight as unqualified a success as was the memorable gathering at which Col. Fowler secured over 100 splendid recruits a short time ago. The invitation is extended to join the parades as they wind their way through the principal streets to the place of meeting. There need be no hesitancy in lending this small assistance for indeed nobody would withhold such co-operation if our boys were returning from the war victorious.

At Queen's rink the Hon. James A. Murray, one of New Brunswick's most spirited orators, will address the meeting on the urgencies of the hour. He will be followed by Sgt. Knight, the Highlander, who has been inspiring the young men of the province for several months. There will be introductory remarks by the chairman and some musical features including selections by the four bands. Military decorations will be present and proper recruiting officials so that any and every man interested in the question of joining the colors may be facilitated to the last degree in carrying out his most commendable desire.

Don't forget to follow the band to-night—it may result in making you feel that you have accomplished the highest ideal in any man's life.

Wanamaker's Turkey Supper Saturday night in aid of Red Cross Society.

Gr. John W. McMurdo, of the Siege Battery left last evening for Moncton, where he will spend a few days' leave at his home.

Rev. H. A. Goodwin, of Moncton, arrived in the city last evening. He will be in St. John for a day or two.

WALTER BRINDLE AND HIS SON JOIN THE COLORS TOGETHER— Rousing recruiting meetings in different parts of the city.

Eight members of his family are now doing their little bit for the Empire, either at the front or in training to go there, and there are others who are going, or who have tried to go. For the past two months Walter and his brother Fred have been doing splendid work in recruiting for the 64th and 104th battalions. Walter, himself, has been through the Boer War and is well qualified to ask other men to enlist. He got to South Africa by stowing away on a transport ship, as he was rejected here on account of being only seventeen years old, and small for his age, but when he got there he soon built up and enlisted at Durban. He saw three years of active service. Since then his health had fallen off a bit and to get to the war this time it was necessary for him to undergo an operation for the removal of varicose veins. "Boys," he said, "things are not the same now as they were in the South African war. Then I was sent into a fight the very next night after I enlisted. I did not get good food, or enough blankets to keep me warm at night, and in spite of all that, I did not dare say a word against it all. Now things have changed. Under Colonel Fowler, you get the best of everything. I have been there and I know. You get the best of food and clothes. There is an oil stove in every tent, and a lantern, and if any of the boys are not warm enough at night all they have to do is to tell the colonel and he will see that they get more blankets. I was in the 9th Mounted Rifles and the 64th, and while I got good treatment there, yet the treatment the boys get in the 104th is far better than in any other regiment or battalion. Colonel Fowler is a real gentleman and will treat all his men as gentlemen.

"A lot of men say I am married and have two or three children, and so I cannot enlist. Well, what of it? I am married and have a wife and three little girls, but I am willing to leave them to go and fight for them, that they might enjoy freedom and liberty all their lives. If the young single men do not go, the married men must go in their places, and all you ought to know the Colonel Fowler's regiment is the very best that ever was raised in New Brunswick, and any man ought to be proud to belong to the 104th New Brunswick Battalion."

After this speech, the band gave another selection, after which Rev. M. E. Fletcher was called upon to speak.

Rev. M. E. Fletcher.

"Here is my diary for 1914," he said, producing a little book and turning to a certain page where there was a line in red ink. "This line in red ink is written on August 7th, 1914, three days after war was declared. It says 'Today Durbin enlisted.' He said after the war started that he felt it was his duty to go, and as that was the way he felt, I could not very well stop him. But, after he had gone, my other boy, who is only sixteen years old, began to go growling around the house as if it was my fault that he had not been born a couple of years sooner, till at last he put it up straight to his mother and me that he wanted to enlist. We told him that if he thought he could get by the recruiting sergeant, and if he really thought it was up to him to do what he could for the Empire, that he could go. Well, I don't exactly know just how he got by on account of his age, because as I am a minister, I am supposed to teach my boys to tell the truth, but I guess he gave the recruiting officer to understand that, though he was born only sixteen years ago, yet he would be eighteen years old tomorrow, or something like that, anyhow, he is down in the armory now, with the 62nd, and I must say that I am proud of my two boys, and they have never regretted for a minute that they enlisted. But besides this, I have offered my services to the Empire, and expect to get to the front before the war is all through."

He then read extracts from his oldest boy's letters from the front, which show that the life in the trenches is not so dangerous as might be expected. "The percentage of casualties is very small, only about 4% killed and 9% to 12% wounded, so you see that in a good many branches of peaceful occupations, there is more risk to a good man in staying at home than there would be if they went to war."

Mr. Fletcher ended.

The meeting was then closed by singing "God Save the King" with the band accompanying. The four men enrolled were B. W. Carvell, Chas. Ellis, J. W. Warner, and Harold B. Moore.

In Fairville.

There was a large crowd attracted to the Fairville Temperance Hall last evening to hear the splendid programme of speakers and entertainers which was carried out. Judge Ritchie and Sgt. Knight gave splendid addresses and the young men present seemed aroused to the keen sense of duty. No recruits were signed on but the boys certainly gave good ideas of what their intentions were. Messrs. Skelton and Morris sang solos and Harry Dunlop assisted at the piano.

J. W. Warner, West St. John.
Harold B. Moore, St. John West.

Three excellent recruiting meetings were held last night and as a result several more young men were accepted as soldiers. The gatherings were in the Victoria rink, in the Carleton drill hall and in the Temperance hall, Fairville. All were largely attended by young men and the proceedings were of great interest. Recruiting officers and medical examiners were present and passed on all offering their services.

In Victoria Rink.

The hall in Victoria rink was well filled and the speakers were given keen attention.

Walter Brindle, who has been assisting at recruiting meetings, enlisted with the Construction Corps and will be sworn in today. His son, Wallace, will be in the corps too. He has another son at the front.

Walter Brindle was a speaker at the meeting. He told of the need for men and the reason he was offering his services. He felt every man was needed in the great struggle and if he stayed at home others had the same privilege. He made a strong plea for men to decide at once.

M. E. Agar presided and in calling the meeting to order explained the need for men.

A. W. Baird gave a reading. R. Carson sang several songs. Mr. Fowler told several stories. Robert Carr was there with his accordion. Michael Kelly presided at the piano.

The City Cornet band played acceptable selections during the meeting. Sergeant Knight made a stirring appeal for men to enlist.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

In Carleton.

Four new men were secured at a rousing recruiting meeting which was held in the old drill hall on Winslow street, West St. John, last evening. Captain A. J. Mulcahy was chairman of the meeting. Private D. Walter Shaw and Rev. M. E. Fletcher spoke, and there was vocal and instrumental music. The 104th band was present and played in a way that left nothing to be desired. For the past two weeks the members of the band have been hard at work drilling, under the direction of Band Sergeant William Lang, and under his able direction they are rapidly learning all the military drill that is necessary for as good a band as they are.

The meeting was opened by a vocal solo, followed by music on a concertina, from William Evans, which was much appreciated by those present. After this, there was a piano solo by Percy Belyea, a talented West St. John musician. He is a member of the Carleton Cornet band, with which he is going to the front.

The next speaker was Private D. Walter Shaw, formerly of the 6th Mounted Rifles and the 64th Battalion but now of the 104th battalion.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be the valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

AN ENJOYABLE AFTERNOON OF MUSIC AND SONG

Ladies of Natural History
Society have splendid entertainment.

A large and appreciative audience filled the auditorium of the Natural History Museum yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. F. B. Ellis read a most interesting lecture on the "Music of Shakespeare." An enjoyable feature of the afternoon was the musical programme of song and pianoforte music. It is not everyday that one has the opportunity of hearing the actual melodies which Shakespeare himself heard in the performances of his plays, and which were so delightfully rendered by Mrs. R. L. Gerow, Mrs. J. M. Barnes, Miss Louise Knight, Miss Madeline DeSoyres and Miss Biederman.

"The English," the writer, Prof. L. M. Harris, said, "are considered one of the most unmusical of nations, and it is true that they have produced but few great composers. Yet, for many years before the time of Shakespeare the love of song lay deep in the heart of the English people. The sweet and somewhat plaintive melodies of olden times are plain, but never vulgar or merely sentimental."

"With the English renaissance there came a new impulse to the development of music in a nation that was already musical in its disposition. What distinguishes the renaissance in England from the renaissance on the continent, what in part explains the supremacy of Shakespeare over all authors, is that in England there was as a ground work an occasion devoted for it, an antiseptic, a vigor, a healthiness, a spontaneity, and a correlative of these qualities, a morality, which was in comparison wanting in Italy and France. The culture of the Latin countries was assimilated with intense enthusiasm, but the grafting was upon a most vigorous native stock, and the growth that followed was less exotic and more durable."

A love of music and among the upper classes a marked degree of musical accomplishment and critical taste was general among the people of England in the sixteenth century, and it therefore is to be expected that in the Elizabethan theatre which was in close touch with the people than the theatre has ever been since, music played a conspicuous part. In the play itself music was introduced in the most generous abundance whenever there could be an occasion devised for it, and not seldom when there was no occasion at all. Besides the regular songs in the plays of which the words are presumably Shakespeare's, there are innumerable allusions to, and fragments of, the ballad, songs, catches and the like which were familiar to everyone. There was also a large amount of instrumental music during the action of the play: sometimes for a wedding procession or rancant, sometimes for dancing or a banquet or to accompany a speech or a dream or one of the characters."

In regard to his plays themselves, the writer goes on to say that "Shakespeare shows a power truly miraculous not in the extent of his knowledge, but in the use he makes of it. It is not the mass of his information that astonishes the true lover of Shakespeare, but the power of his imagination to fuse and make luminous a relatively moderate quantity of facts and terms. In the whole range of literature there is no such exhibition of the power to enforce and vivify emotions and ideas by means of figurative language."

Mrs. Ellis then read several passages from Shakespeare's plays to illustrate the various points brought out in the lecture.

The musical programme was as follows:

Mrs. DeSoyres—"Where suck the bee there suck I."

Mrs. B. L. Gerow—"Drink to me only with thine eyes."

Miss Louise Knight—"Should he upbraid," "Hark, Hark, the Lark."

Mrs. Barnes—Solo, instrumental, "Mr. Shakespeare."

Mrs. J. M. Barnes and Miss Biederman—Overture by Mendelssohn.

The next lecture in this course will be on Italy by Mrs. C. A. Robinson and Miss Louise Knight, next Thursday afternoon in the Museum.

Rhodes, Curry Co. Ltd.,
rushing new sheds—
Ready for opening of season.

Byron A. Bent, superintendent for the Rhodes Curry Co. Ltd., and a gang of about sixty carpenters are rushing the work on the new warehouses at Sand Point and will have them all ready for the winter port business in a short time. Shed A, which is situated at the end of No. 15 berth has been roofed over and the paper placed on it. The new shed at No. 7 berth has been almost completed and is now ready for the placing of the doors.

Shed B, which is near No. 15 berth, will have the roof placed on it today. The carpenters yesterday were at work putting in the crib work for shed D, which is built parallel with No. 15 shed, and it will be only a matter of a few days when this shed is completed. The work is going along very satisfactorily.
