The Daily Tribune.

J. L. STEWART, Editor.

MONDAY EVENING, OCT. 13, 1873.

The Canada Pacific Railway.

After the publication of Sir Hugh Allan's letter to Smith and McMillan, the Tribune declared that the Government should get rid of Allan in some way, and asserted that there was no prospect of the additional legislation that was understood to be called for by the terms made with English capitalists.

It was granted to long as Sir Hugh held on to the Presidency of the Company. The Tribune was the only paper friendly to the Government that took this position. The others claimed that the work would go on with Sir Hugh as President.

On Friday morning a number of men were crossing the river at Lawrence, and above the dam, as we have to work on the river, which upset the boat, throwing out the passengers. They were all unable to swim, and it was with great difficulty that any of them were saved from the river.

is now the subject of inquiry in Superior Court, where it has been proved, by the testimony of one of the examiners, that the other applicant for the office passed a better examination than Mr. Young. The corruption or gross favoritism by which the examiners abused their position by attempting to force the positive of a stolen letter into an office of trust has thus been fully exposed, and the irreparable game will be told.

The Antigonish Gaslet says arrangements are in progress to extend the Railway from New Glasgow to Cape Breton, and that a Company is now prepared to adopt the scheme proposed several times in Parliament by the Hon. Hugh Macdonald. The projectors are sanguine of the success of the enterprise.
