Editor's Talk

THIS week we begin the publication of a new story by W. A. Fraser, the Canadian novelist. The author of "Thoroughbreds," "Mooswa" and "Blood Lilies" needs no introduction to Canadian readers. His short stories have appeared in every Canadian publication of note, and in nearly every leading periodical in New York and London. There is hardly a famous Editor in the English-speaking world who has not addressed a request for short stories to "Mr. W. A. Fraser, Georgetown, Ont."

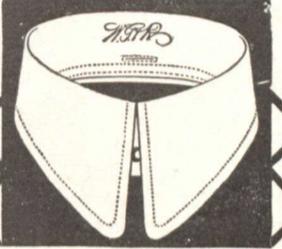

This story tells the experiences of a Western Policeman, one of the famous R. N. W. M. P.'s, who disguised as a clergyman goes forth to seek some whiskey-smugglers in the Foothills. The men whose secret he dared to probe were hard, daring, reckless chaps and the parson took extraordinary risks. To these men "spy" or "traitor" was a sentence of death. Then again, a woman comes into the case, and "twixt love and duty" once more plays a part.

The story will run through about ten issues but no reader will go away disappointed. This is our prophecy.

HON. MR. MOTHERWELL contributes to this issue a letter on the Saskatchewan wheat crop which removes all doubt as to its size. Those who have been skeptical of the wonderful figures will be reassured. Mr. Motherwell hands the Jonahs a generous antidote.
