

CAN MAKE MEN SOUND AND STRONG

Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New For the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

YOU PAY ONLY IF CURED

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You. Method and Full Particulars Sent Free. Write for it This Very Day.

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from colleges and medical boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes, and so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he

DR. S. GOLDBERG.

The possessor of 14 diplomas and certificates who wants no money but he does not earn.

Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their names and address. He wants to know from men who have stricken that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, blood poisoning, hydrocele, gonorrhea, etc., and he will send them the method of cure, which is the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one who make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Avenue, Room F, Detroit, Mich., and he will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

A KNIGHT ERRANT.

De Chailu's High Ideal of Womanhood and the Obligations It Imposed on the Great Traveler.

Perhaps the finest thing about the late Paul du Chailu was his high ideal of womanhood and the obligations it imposed upon him. His convictions were chivalrous enough for the days of knight errantry, says a Paris letter.

He would stand bareheaded in the winter winds if conversing with a woman on the street, and he was constantly protesting against the breaking down of the old time standards of manners. He reined in instincts and habitual deference kept him to the end very much of a beau in the best sense. There was nothing he enjoyed more than escorting a party of young girls to a matinee.

"It is just like being in a flower garden," he would explain. His weakest trait was bound up with his strongest. He was morbidly sensitive on the subject of his age. The short road to his good will was to compliment him upon his youthful appearance. One could count upon receiving a bit of candy a moment later, slyly drawn from his waistcoat pocket. There is no doubt that he was born much earlier than 1835, the year he assigned; but, as Helen Everston Smith, who met him in 1853, when, in her opinion, he was nearly thirty, has well suggested, his misstatements arose from misapprehension and not intention.

With his whimsical chivalry and vanity it is astonishing he never married. But he used to quote the fellow who said, "I would not marry a woman unless I respected her, and I would not respect a woman who would marry me." Once he remarked that, so far as women were concerned, his heart was like the Paris India rubber omnibus, in which there was always room for one more.

Delhi's Famous Iron Pillar.

The famous iron pillar of Delhi is dealt with in Cassier's Magazine. The pillar is a solid shaft of wrought iron, 16 inches in diameter, and of a length that is variously reported. The total length is from 48 to 60 feet underground and above, including a capital of 3 1/2 feet. The pillar contains about 80 cubic feet of metal, and weighs about seventeen tons. The metal is, of course, charcoal iron, made directly from ore in small billets, but how it was worked up by no one can tell, as no record exists of any early method of dealing with great masses of wrought iron. An inscription roughly cut or punched upon the column states that Rajah Dhara subdued a people in the Surda, named Vahikas, and obtained with his own arm an undivided sovereignty on the earth for a long period. The date of the inscription has been referred to the third or fourth century after Christ, but on this authorities are at variance.

Elements of the Atmosphere.

Lord Rayleigh and Sir William Ramsay's discovery of argon in the atmosphere led to the finding of the still more elusive elements, krypton and xenon. Sir William has followed up that classic piece of work by an attempt to estimate the quantity of these substances existing in the air. Omitting the detail of processes that demanded the utmost skill and nicety, the outcome was .000014 per cent. by weight of krypton and .0000025 per cent. by weight of xenon. Or, in words, one part by weight of the former in seven millions of air, and one part of the latter in forty millions of air. But these elements, measured by volume as constituent gases of our atmosphere, are still less conspicuous; for, so calculated, we have only one part in twenty millions of krypton and one in 170 millions of xenon. No wonder that chemists and physicists were a long time in capturing such rare infinitesimals.

Joys of Authorship.

What are the chances (asks the London Morning Post), in favor of the acceptance of a manuscript by an author with an as yet unestablished reputation? A writer in the American Critic thinks he has thrown some light on the question by certain statistics compiled from such records kept by such an one. An "inquisitive friend" took from the manuscript book containing them the entries relating to fifty-three articles and stories (not selected) that had got safe into harbor. The average, he found, worked out at rather more than five trials for each manuscript disposed of. No less than forty-four were rejected and only nine accepted when sent in for the first time. One was successful at the thirtieth attempt!

Millions of Bibles.

During the first year's work of the British and Foreign Bible Society 100 years ago they spent £69, and thought they had done a big thing. So they had, but they were to do more. Last year they spent £241,143, and since the foundation of the society they have expended £13,000,000. These are big figures, but when translated into numbers of books they are bigger still. The society's year issued over 5,000,000 copies of the Scriptures, and since its commencement a total of 180,000,000. Seven thousand volumes are sent out from London alone every day of the year. The output from all the society's depots, including London, averages 16,000 copies per day.

Improving Matters.

A country doctor drove into a certain town to purchase a horse. The dealer, however, failed to persuade him to buy the animal, and as he returned home the doctor said to his groom, "Ah, Thomas, that man tried to take me in; but I am not such a fool as I look, eh?" "No, sir," replied the groom, "that you are not." The doctor looked round rather suspiciously. Thomas felt he had said something not quite right, touched his hat, and added, "Beg pardon, sir, I mean you hadn't need to be."

THE HUMBERTS GUILTY.

Close of One of the Greatest Trials in France.

Paris, Aug. 24.—One of the greatest criminal trials in the history of France culminated on Saturday when the jury in the Court of Assizes rendered a verdict of guilty against Therese and Frederic Humbert and Romaine and Emile Daurignac. After a brief deliberation the court sentenced Therese and Frederic Humbert each to five years and a fine of 100 francs; Emile Daurignac to three years, and Romaine Daurignac to two years imprisonment. Frederic Humbert acted as though dazed by the shock of conviction, his thin face assuming a ghastly pallor. Romaine and Emile Daurignac preserved an air of stolid indifference. Therese thanked her lawyers, and then calmly announced that she was ready to go to prison. The chief event preceding the verdict was the dramatic revelations which Therese Humbert had so long promised, in the making of which she disclosed the same genius which has marked her entire career, as indicated by her selection of the mysterious name of Regnier as the real Crawford. The letter was the name the Humberts used to designate an alleged American family, whose vast fortune, in the shape of bonds, was securely locked up in a safe in their residence. The story they told was that Madame Therese Humbert had an interest in the bonds, and, pending the outcome of the litigation with the Crawfords, the court had designated her as custodian of the bonds, upon which, of course, she could not realize while the proceedings were progressing. Under pretence of fighting their side in the case the Humberts succeeded in borrowing large sums of money from various people. The bonds, of course, are fictions.

GOING TO TELL IT.

The Great South American Rheumatism Cure; the kind that cures in a few days the most obstinate and painful cases. If you have a friend suffering from that horror, or from lumbago or neuralgia, it is your duty at least to offer it to him. It will relieve, with the first dose. You too.

William Marshall, of Varney Post Office, County of Gray, Ontario, writes: "For the last year I was continually in bed. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctoring and medicines which proved of little relief. The first dose of South American Rheumatism Cure gave me instant relief. I am completely cured."

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVE TONIC builds up into vigor and health the most shattered systems. It is unmatched in female complaints, or general debility in either sex.

The Worm Turns.

They were almost ready to start, and like a good husband, Mr. Smoker waited patiently for his wife to put the finishing touches to her toilet. She was adjusting her hat and took a hat pin from a big cushion. Suddenly she exclaimed:

"I think it's a shame!"

"Yes, my dear," nervously assented Mr. Smoker.

"I mean the way these writers say that women sharpen lead pencils and open cans with their husbands' razors." "Yes, my dear."

"Yes. Now, I never do such things with your razor, and I don't believe any woman does as the writers allege. I looked at your razor once when I had a box of sardines to open, but it was so sharp and so wabbling in the handle that I was afraid to use it. Besides, when I want to sharpen a pencil and have no knife I nibble a point on it."

"Yes, my dear."

"But if the writers wish to put something true in the papers why don't they go for the men who use their wives' hat pins for pipe cleaners? Ugh, you nasty brutes!"

Mr. Smoker forgot to say "Yes, my dear."

John Wesley's Shrewish Wife. One of his biographers declares that if he had searched the whole kingdom the evangelist John Wesley would hardly have found a woman more unsuitable than she whom he married.

She did not even confine herself to her tongue in her attacks. More than once she laid violent hands on him. "Jack," said John Hampson to his son, "I was once on the point of committing the murder. It was when I was in the north of Ireland and I went into a room and found Mrs. Wesley fuming with fury. Her husband was on the floor, where she had been trailing him by the hair of his head, and she herself was still holding in her hand venerable locks which she had plucked out by the roots. I felt," continued Hampson, who was a giant of a man, though not one of Wesley's warmest friends—"I felt as though I could have knocked the soul out of her."—Everybody's Magazine.

Moorish Baths. In Spain, while the Moors were in the ascendancy, luxurious hot baths were established. They were used in connection with the religious rites of Islam. The Islamites were required to bathe frequently. The manner of bathing was as follows:

After undressing, the bather was wrapped in a woollen coat, sandals are put on and he walks to the hot bath. After a thorough hot bath all parts of the body are rubbed. The soles of the feet are rubbed with pumice stone, then the body is anointed with oil and sprinkled with perfumed powders.

When the Moors were driven out of Spain the first thing the people did was to destroy the Moorish bath houses. This was done because of religious prejudice against the Moors.

Three Curious Epitaphs.

In a cemetery near Dublin the following words appear on a tombstone: "Here lies John Hurley, whose father and mother died while on their way home from America. If they had lived they would have been buried here."

The following epitaph adorns the tomb of a gravedigger in the Talbach cemetery in the south of Wales:

"Hurrah, comrades, parson is dead! If he had lived he would have buried all of us."

Here is another curious epitaph which was recently discovered; it marks the grave of an indefatigable smoker and contains only the following four words:

"My pipe is out."

Grant's Estimate of His Generals.

In Grant's estimate of the abilities of the generals of the armies, says an officer of Grant's staff in the National Magazine, I think it is safe to say that Sherman stood first. For John A. Logan he perhaps entertained the warmest personal feelings. His friendship for this brilliant soldier was very pronounced. General Thomas he considered a safe man and an indomitable fighter. Sheridan was one of his special favorites. He considered this dashing soldier almost invincible.

Good Sense.

Good sense is a fund slowly and painfully accumulated by the labor of centuries. It is a jewel of the first water, whose value he alone understands who has lost it, or who observes the lives of others who have lost it. For my part, I think no price too great to pay for gaining it and keeping it, for the possession of eyes that see and a judgment that discerns.

Making Allowances.

Bronson—I don't see why you should be so angry at your son for marrying. We have to make allowances for the young, you know.

Munson—Confound it, that's what I'm kicking about. I not only have to make an allowance for him, but now I'll have to make one for his wife too.

Where Financial Plan Fails.

"What we need is not a larger supply of money, but more highly developed forms of credit."

"That's just it. But do you know the sort of thing wouldn't go with my tailor?"

An Anomaly.

The average young woman doesn't wish to see her thirtieth birthday. Yet when she has seen it she would like to see it again.

Don't work so hard that when there is a funeral in the family your grief is tempered by the thought that it means a day off.—Archison Globe.
