One Thing Free.

The sinful trusts, which scheme together, a little mundane things to own, can't get their talons on the weather—thats they must leave alone. Oh, nearly all life's necessities cost so they make us bawl, but one great blessing never varies—the weather's free to all! No man's so poor he cannot wallow in weather day by day; he knows that in the days to follow, 'twill be the same old way. The trusts, those grasping, soulless varmints, may boss the universe, may rule the price of grub and garments, of cradle and of hearse, may raise the price of shredded heather, flaked wheat and bonnet tea, but they must keep hands off the weather—that blessing still is free! The trusts have piped our drinking water (I hope the piping busts!), the hat you purchase for your daughter is sent forth by the trusts; the coal you burn, the oil, the kindling, are trust controlled, my friend; what wonder that your wad is dwindling, your patience near at end! The trusts have raised the tax on leather until you have no shoes, and all that's left you is the weather, to comfort and amuse. My indigestion—I can't rhyme it—stirs all my soul, by jing, the while I fill myself with climate, and try to dance and sing!

WHAT DOES IT MATTER?

What does it matter, I often think, as we jostle and crowd each other. Whether we travel life's rugged way behind or ahead of our brother? Why need we crowd and jostle so? Why hasten so swiftly along? With never a pause in the wayside shade for a whispered prayer or song? Trugging your children, being comforted with pain and sorrow. If the faint heart shrinks in fear and dread at the tasks to be done to-morrow? The rosy tints of the dawn will come with strength for the day's stern duty. And only those who have known the night can enjoy the morning's beauty.

What does it matter if plain our garb and rough our hands with labor, if fame and gold come not to us as they do to some lucky neighbor? The truest wealth is not gold or lands but a heart that is true and cheery. A faith that brightens as days grow dark and smiles when the way is dreary.

What does it matter if all unknown, unhonored, unsung we are living. Where the eyes of the world can never see the service we're gladly given? Faithful labor hath sure reward, for the Master's eye ne'er sleepeth. He knows where weary gleaner toils and a fadless record keepeth.

LENS, France, Sept. 3.
Thirty-seven miners are believed to have been killed by the explosion of fire damp in a coal mine near Bruay, Nord Dept. The explosion badly wrecked the mine. Seventy men were at work at the time of the explosion. Work of rescue started without delay, but up to to-night the rescuers had taken out three bodies and twenty-three living, all of whom were terribly burned. The entombed men were working in a remote part of the pit, and it is believed it is impossible to save any.

Fish Refused Shipment.

Yesterday a fisherman from the Battery brought fifty quintals of "made" fish to a mercantile premises for shipment. On examination, however, the merchant refused to take it as it was not properly cured and unfit for foreign market. The vendor, who probably experienced a great deal of trouble curing the fish, felt his position keenly on being refused sale; but then on the other hand if the merchant had taken the fish for shipment to a foreign port the result might be detrimental to the staple industry of the colony.

Patients Arrive.

There arrived by last night's train a female patient named Miller, of Trinity. She fell a few days ago and broke her arm and has gone to the General Hospital for treatment. Constable Lee came in from Marytown with a male patient for the Lunatic Asylum. Mrs. H. Russell, of Bay Roberts, who arrived last night entered the Hospital for treatment.

If you desire to attract favorable attention do not go around with an olive branch in your beak. Instead, start a row.

The Auditor General came here on Saturday last for the purpose of auditing the books of the Savings Bank and Water Company. He remained only a couple of days.

The schooner Cumberland, F. Barron, master, is now at Fox Harbour, where she will finish loading fish for the firm of Baine Johnston & Co.

The cable steamer Cloverly came here on Tuesday last for the purpose of repairing the cable which was out of order outside Placentia. She left yesterday evening after finishing her work.

We are glad to see our Customs' Officer, Mr. E. O'Reilly, about again after his narrow escape from death by a motor car at St. John's, in July last. Though badly injured there is evidently good stuff in him for he is now improving rapidly, and we hope to see him at his work soon.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor Reardon left by last evening's train for St. John's, and will leave for Canada with His Grace Archbishop Howley by Sunday's express.

The building of the new school house is progressing rapidly under the management of Mr. Doran. It will be a splendid building and an ornament to the place. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Reardon deserves to be congratulated on his untiring energy for the welfare of his parish.

Phantom Ships That Reappear in Times of Great Storms.

The number of phantom ships is legion, says the London Standard. Several of the vessels which were wrecked in close proximity to the scene of the Titanic disaster are even said to reappear in the same spot on certain occasions. The Packet Light is one of these and the story runs that whenever a storm is threatened a ball of fire emerges from the spot where the ship sank, which presumes forms itself into the shape of a vessel and then sinks and disappears.

King George V. and his brother, the late Duke of Clarence, when on their cruise in the Bacchante from 1879 to 1882, are stated to have seen the phantom of the Flying Dutchman and the Duke mentioned the fact in his diary under the date of July 11, 1881.

A three-masted frigate is said to haunt the English Channel in the vicinity of Ower Lightship whenever a gale or snowstorm is threatened. Hundreds of people have declared they have seen the apparition and heard the cries of the ghostly passengers. It is sometimes said to be the phantom of the training ship Eurydice which went down off the Isle of Wight on March 24, 1878, involving the loss of about 200 lives. There are a host of vessels which have not been heard of since they sailed, but one of the most marvellous stories concerns the Mari Celeste, a French passenger sailing ship. She was sighted by the British ship Highlander on October 4, 1877, and in reply to the signals gave the answer "All's well." Two days later when sighted, she did not reply. She was boarded, but not a living or dead person was found on board.

Everything was in perfect order. Luncheon was laid in the saloon, the personal belongings of the passenger and crew were intact, and a bottle of medicine was found upright in the captain's locker. The log had been kept down to the previous day, but there was no entry to account for the mysterious disappearance of all on board. Nothing was heard afterwards of any of the passengers and crew.

Largest Battle- ship Afloat.

Although authorities differ as to the dimensions of the recently launched British battle cruiser, "Queen Mary," there seems little reason to doubt that she is the largest warship afloat at the present time. Some authorities give her dimensions as follows: Length over all, 725 feet, beam 87 feet, and displacement, 29,000 tons. She will probably make over 30 knots on trial, and to do this her turbines will have to develop not far short of 100,000 horse-power. The "Moltke," of 23,500 tons approximately displacement, required 30,000 horse-power to drive her at from 29 to 29½ knots.

Dear Sirs,—We have nothing but good to say of Mathieu's Syrup and can conscientiously describe it as the most popular and successful Cough Medicine we handle. Owing to the absence of any drug store in this vicinity there is a great variety of proprietary medicine sold in the course of the year, and Mathieu's Syrup pre-eminently leads in its own class. Yours sincerely,
D. MARTIN.
