A Youth's Headless, Armless Body Found on the Grand Trunk Track.

of the victim. On arriving at the diamond crossing about three miles distant from the scene of the accident he procured the help of three or tour trainmen, and an engine and box-car were immediately dispatched. They gathered up the remains and brought them to the G. T. R. station here, whence they were conveyed to Kilgour's undertaking establishment, 357 Richmond street, for identification. DESCRIPTION OF THE VICTIM. DESCRIPTION OF THE VICTIM.

The remains were evidently those of a youth about 17 years of age, fair haired, and of a somewhat emaciated appearance. He was dressed in a suit of dark gray color, two white and blue checked gingham shirts and a small silk cap and a pair of tattered shoes and socks completed his apparel. In his coat pockets were found a small rolling pin such as is used for ornamental purposes, a small flat stone and two small pieces of lead-pencil, while in his right hand he clenched a large pocket-knife with the blades closed.

Coroner Smith was notified immediately on the arrival of the body and the following jury was empaneled: H. E. Bates (foreman), H. J. Carter, Geo. Taylor, James Kilgour, Wm. H. Hodgins, John Young, Freeman Perkins, John Collier, Andrew Martin, R. A. Lacroix, Daniel Andrews, Wm. Dell, W. H. Ward, Daniel McNama. After viewing the remains it was decided to hold an inquest on Thursday evening at the hold an inquest on Thursday evening at the Court House.

Arter viewing the remains it was declared to hold an inquest on Thursday evening at the Court House.

The THEORY OF THE ACCIDENT.

The supposition is that the boy attempted to steal a ride during Saturday night, and boarded an east-bound train at this city. Either from carelessness or falling asleep he had tumbled under the cars and was killed by the wheels passing over his arms and neck. Another train following in the same direction had probably struck the trunk, carrying it a distance from the remaining members. The trunk was lying beside the track about 50 yards west of the Wabuno bridge and between five and six miles from the G. T. R. station here.

The body will remain at Kilgour's for identification until the inquest. Detective Graham had the head photographed and left for Dorchester in order to obtain if possible any clue to the boy's identity.

Large crowds have been streaming in Kilgour's all day long to view the remains of the victim of the accident, but no one has yet identified the youth. The Chief of Police received the following telegram this morning from J. J. Vaughan, the Chief of Police at Brantford:

E. Jonathan ran away to London from here Tuesday last. Seventeen years; five feet three: fair hair dark clothes; low shoes; dark pants, with light stripe; birth mark on head. Is he the boy killed at railway? If not, and shaded in the description of the body tallies with that found here. The clothes are not exactly as described. An answer was sent to that effect.
