About -Politics Talked Of.

The breakwater committee of the city council met last night and advanced the breakwater scheme a stage by recomnending to the council that a bylaw be submitted to the people, asking them tal out of the breakwater during the to sanction the issue of $15,000 debentures for the purpose of constructing an earthen embankment or breakwater o protect West London from floods, Mr. Jennings' report being accepted in its entirety. Mayor Beck, Ald. Stevely, Judd Wyatt, and Chairman Forristal, were present, together with a deputation of West Londoners, who are also nembers of the committee: Messrs.W. T. Hamilton, D. Collins, F. A. Jones and W. M. Spence. The meeting was not without its feaures, because Mr. Jones took occasion during the evening to let the mayor and aldermen know that a portion, at least, of the people of West London, are of the opinion that the city council does not mean business, and is submitting a bylaw to the people for the purpose of merely staying off the West Londoners. Ald. Forristal also accused Mr. Jones of dragging the breakwater into politics at the last election, and was told in pointed language that it was the mayor who had dragged the matter in at the West London meeting, held in support of Mr.Gray. Mayor Beck also made an important admiselection speeches, and that was that when Hon. C. S. Hyman told the people the Dominion Government has no too cold! In reply to a question of the mayor's, Engineer Graydon replied that the cost of a masonry wall in the section necessary would be about $30,000. This would be on the section south of Oxford street bridge, a distance of something like 1,750 feet. The estimate was based on an average of $16 per lineal foot, Mr. Jennings, having estimated the cost at between $15 and $18 per foot. Mr. Graydon further pointed out that it is also Mr. Jennings' idea to construct an earthen wall, beginning at the natural slope, inside the present breakwater slope, and running high higher than the highest level of the river in flood-time.

The mayor, after pointing out that the estimated cost of the entire earthing held by Evangelist Moorhouse, in en wall, is, according to Mr. Jennings' Askin Street Methodist Church, con- estimate, about one-half the cost of a tinue to attract interest among the retaining wall of masonry, and that people of South London. It also be remembered that the should present breakwater is almost gone, and the danger to West London is increasing at a double rate through the weakening of the wall, and through the increased force of the floods, which are growing greater annually, through the action of dramage which is being perfected in this district from year to is now exposed might be expected to Hamilton, when asked for his permission to levy a special tax on the opinion of Mr. Jennings' proposal, said that no doubt what the engineer reported is a very good thing, but not living here, Mr. Jennings does exactly what West London He said, too, that the engineer's estimate of the cost of the neceshimself on record as in favor of the The mayor remarked to Mr. Hamilton that. > People Being Humbugged. Mr. F. A. Jones said it had been said that the breakwater committee is humbugging the people of West London, and he is of the same opinion now. To his mind, and to the mind of many other West Londoners, the council is merely marking time. The mayor objected to Mr. Jones using the word humbug in connection with the committee Ald. Forristal declared that Mr. Jones recent election. Mr. Jones replied sharply that if certain people had seen fit to introduce the breakwater into a political contest. he (Jones) was not to be blamed if he gave the people the facts in the case. Mr. Jones then quoted a paragraph from the Free Press to show that the people of West London have been "humbugged," as he termed it, for many months, by this year's council. Mr. Wm. Spence also addressed the committee and expressed the fear, as did also Mr. Collins, that the water will gradually wash away an earthen breakwater at the north end. Such a breakwater, Mr. Spence said, should be protected as far south as Cherry street. Mr. Leslie also stated that to the best of his knowledge all the people whose land abutted on the present breakwater had signed over fifteen feet of land to the village of London West when the wall was built some years ago, but Engineer Graydon said there were no records to show that such is the case. Mr. Dan Collins bore cut the engineer's statement, declaring that while he had given some land for to the cost of the land necessary in orthe breakwater, he had never deeded it to the city of London.

Ways and Means. power to help in the construction of a

Mayor Beck undertook to make lengthy explanation of the matter. He mit a bylaw to the people authorizing aid that, the committee being now practically wall for a breakwater, the next matter to consider was ways and means. Such a wall would cost from $15,000 to $20,000. Some time tgo he had thought of asking the Legislature to permit the city of London to use the $1,200 raised in West London each year through the special 25-mill rate, for the purpose of paying off the sinking fund and interest of debentures raised for the purpose of constructing a breakwater, but he had ascertained that this was the last year of the 25-mill rate, and he was compelled to abandon the scheme. Then there does not appear to be much chance of London securing aid for breakwater from either the Dominion or Ontario Governments. Hon. Mr. Hyman had told them that such matters cannot be dealt with by the Dominion Government, and he believed h was right. He himself had interviewe the Ontario Government on the subject but as Brantford and many other places were after grants for breakwaters, the Government dared not set precedent by making a grant to any-one place. In short, the matter at present stands thus: If the work is to be done, funds must be raised by placing a bylaw before the people for the issue of the necessary debentures, and, failing this, by the presentation of a petition of West Londoners, to the Legislature, asking permission to levy special tax on all property-holders of the suburb.

"If the Government was changed, what would be the result-would the Conservatives help the people to build breakwater?" asked Mr. W. T. Ham-"No; I think it would be in the same position as the present Government,' replied the mayor. "There are many places after grants." Continuing, the mayor said the very grave dangers to which West London cause the Legislature to grant the city

A Pointed Question.

Mr. Jones wanted to know if it not a fact that the Government had pledged itself, and had passed a law, three or your years ago, guaranteeing to pay 35 per cent of the cost of any and all walls or embankments structed for the purpose of protecting had told him such was the case, h The mayor said he was not aware

Ald. Judd declared it was a grav question, in his mind, as to whether an earthen wall would resist floods on the section between Oxford street and Blackfriars street. He suggested that it should be still further strengthened with piles. All things considered, he felt the cost of the wall would be about $20,000—and this left the question uppermost. How can this sum be raised should also be borne in mind that sufficient money should be asked to put up a solid strong wall—one that wil adequately protect the suburb from any and all floods. He said the peopl of London will not vote $40,000 for breakwater, but he declared they w vote for $20,000, without asking ques tions. He explained that if the $20,000 debentures were issued tomorrow, it would mean an addition to the city's debt in sinking fund and interest of Mr. Fred Haselgrove said when Er gineer Graydon's report re a breakwater was made, some time ago. he. a one who is deeply interested in West London, was well pleased with it. and now he was doubly pleased with it since Mr. Jennings had confirmed it He said, however, that nothing was being done toward the widening of the spans of the cove bridge, so as to give the water a wider channel in flood-time, and this was an important matter which should not be lost sight of. The mayor explained that the G. T. R. management some time ago promised to look into the matter, and widen Read Friday's Advertiser.

Missionary Describes People and Customs and Work Being Carried On.

Last evening was spent pleasantly and profitably by those who gathered in St. James Sunday school, South London, to hear Miss Thomas, a missionary from South America. Miss Thomas has been for the last six years at a station on the coast of Chili, where a church and a training school have been established, and was therefore very conversant with the manners and customs of the people of the southern continent. She pointed out that Chil had a temperate climate, and that its population was composed of Indians and the natives, who are descendants from the Spanish. The latter considered themselves much above the others Miss Thomas said that the Indians were a receptive people, and took to Christianity. She described how the native doctors seek to cure sick persons by beating a drum for several hours at their bedside.
