They entered he depot with over 20 cars, amid the nost tumultuous cheering from fully ten thousand people who thronged the station. Three regiments, now in garrison here, with the bands of music, national societies, police and fire brigades, escorted the bronzed Canadian heroes through Main street and Grand avenue, thronged with spectators. The entire route was the scene of incessant cheering, waving of handkerchiefs and throwing of boquets at the general's staff and officers. The members of St. Andrew's society were at their arch, and gave the troops an enthusiastic greeting. As they passed under, three Highland pipers, in full costume, played on the top of it. A halt was made in front of the new city hall, when the troops formed in hollow square. Acting Mayor Carruthers, on behalf of the citizens, presented a congratulatory address to General Middleton. The general responded, and in the name of his comrades in arms thanked the citizens for their cordial welcome. Three regiments, now in garrison here, with the bands of music, nawhen the troops formed in hollow square. Acting Mayor Carruthers, on behalf of the citizens, presented a congratulatory address to General Middleton. The general responded, and in the name of his comrades in arms thanked the citizens for their cordial welcome. He paid a high tribute to Canadian volunteers, and said that they had left peaceful duties and gone into the field. They had undergone tremendeus hardships, and had done so most cheerfully. During the whole campaign he did not hear one single grumble from the volunteer soldiers. When he looked back on what had been accomplished he felt that Canada could well congratulate herself on the bravery of her sons. He closed by calling upon the volunteers to give three cheers for the mayor and citizens of Winnipeg. They were given with such heartiness as to make the welkin ring. His honor, Lieut.—Governor Aikins, next addressed the volunteers in appropriate terms, and was followed by the red the country by the volunteers.
