life. Being an expert tradesman, the exter- by a circle of intemperate companions. At night he did so; years have passed since then, nal respectability and worldly comforts of the family are such as formerly they were strangers to. His wife through life has been a sober, well-doing person, and some faint idea may be formed of the happiness which now fills her bosom. Abstinence she declares was the instrument in the hand of God of effecting the blessed change.

Mrs —— is a widow. She has been a mem-- i: a widow. ber for a lenghtened period, probably fifteen years; previously she was much addicted to drink, but is now hving under the influence of the truths of the gospel. The circumstances attending her ease are all of a cheering description her intemperate career she lived in the immediate vicinity of a public house, at which she was almost constantly employed. She was a most accomplished and expert laundress; and a great deal of this description of work falling to be done the a, she was to the bouse in this respect a most important personage; but beyond this, all that she carned went to the coffers of the publican. The chagrin of mine host and hostess was awful. when they discovered that she had taken the pledge; and doubly was this increased, if that were possible, as week a ceeded week, and still she seemed resolute in her determination to abide by the principle she has espoused. Their prophecies, and many besides, were, that a very short time would suffice to cure her new-frangled notions. Time rolled on, however, and miserably were they disappointed. Many were the baits and snares which were laid in her way; to several of the persons who frequented the house inducements were held out could they only effect her estrangement from the pledge. On one occasion, to a drinking party who were carousing in the house, the landlord offered a brown bowl of toddy; but their every attempt failed. Weeks, months, and years flew past, and wit- the heart of his wife, by his frightful excesses. nessed this formerly misguided woman improving rapidly in her circumstances, abundance of employment was within her reach, her earnings were appropriated to their right and on his preparing to leave home one morn-tit one day shed its cheering beams upon a use, and wondrous was the change. But not to her own use only were these earnings devoted; some helpless orphan children (grandchildren, I think) were brought to reside with mation, for even woman's love must die under our warfare is accomplished-fall asleep in her, and all their wants cared for. But the reformation did not terminate here, she commenced to attend the ministry of the Rev Mr and after a time was admitted in communion. The circle is but limited who know the real worth of - Beneath her humble and unpretending exterior, however, throbs a soil which is alive to the magnitude of the deeds to his family, through intemperance, debt it owes to redeeming love. Many years have now fleeted past since the night thatsigned the pledge; but still she rejoices in the step thus taken—designating that step as the initiatory one to all her after bliss, temporal and spiritual; yes she fears

That Jesus' name she ne'er had known, Had she her drink retained.

And what of the publican and his family? Alas! they are no more. The house they once occupied, and in which they were surrounded with abundance, is now occupied by a thing, after all you have wasted?"

the time of my calling, he was just recovering from an attack of debrium fremens; still, his recovery was not so far advanced as wholly to relieve the anxious fears of his sorrowing relatives, whom I found seated around his bedside. Gradually, however, he recovered, and deeply pentent, to all appearance, he determined, so soon as restored to move about in the bustle of life, that his ways should be amended, and the intoxicating cup abandoned for ever. His recovery was satisfactory, and all his good resolves put into practice: for a time he adhered strictly to the pledge, to the delight of those same relatives, who at one time entertained but feeble hope of his again resuming his place in this life. But oh! how strong is the power of temptation, and godless associates: they waylaid his every step, and with the coils of their subtle snares, again they entangled him into the meshes of their iniquitous ways. Deeply as this is to be deplored, it mitigated the feelings of anguish, both in the breast of himself and relatives, that he had not proceeded to the lengths he had formerly done. Again he listened to wisdom's counsels, and, with a heart doubly broken and subdued he renewed the step formerly taken. He is now at the head of a respectable, and growing business, but beyond this, he is now a member of the Christian Church; and may be there remain, till life's warfare is accomplished. How numerous are happiness and well-doing.

of years. Before joining he had almost broken and the violence by which these were accompanied. Despairing of his reformation, she at length determined to separate from him; her words had entered his soul, and he wan- follow us.' dered about the country, racked by the tortures of an accusing conscience; his past misand his sinfulness in the sight of God, rising in fearful distinctness before him. Late in the evening, he sought his home, and happy was his poor wife to see him, notwithstanding all his faults, for his lengthened absence had alarmed her, lest her threat had driven him to do himself some bodily harm. Next morning, after breakfast, he asked if he could have a sixpence. Poor wife! how many sixpences had he wrung from her to carry on his debauches! It was little wonder then that she and still he is faithful to his promise. He is now a respectable member of society—is a member in a certain congregation- in short, a new man, the pride of the household he so long disgraced, the joy of the heart he had so long crushed, and so nearly broken, and now fulfils the great end of his creation—"glorifying God."

And thus, for the present, I close these mcidents, hoping their perusal may, in some degree, have awakened an interest in the bosoms of some, towards this growing cause; and also, the number of those united to this principle, something may have been said to antmate them with renewed vigour in waging war with this huge iniquity. Oh that the Christian community would weigh this matter Surely it is worthy of their considerationwhether a cause producing such fruit, does not deserve their unqualified approbation instead of coldness and contempt, if not active hostility. Our 'peace rejoicings' are still in the distance, but most assuredly a generation will arise, which will one day enter the sanctuaries of the land, to unite in thanksgivings to the Almighty for the emancipation of our poor country from the thraldom of the grim tyrant. Oh, then, look upward!—move onward !- think on the sacrifices of men clothed with the like infirmities that we have, in seeking the accomplishment of their lofty objects, 'they had trials of cruel mockings and scourgthe temptations that surround the path of ings, of bonds and imprisonment; they were every reformed inebriate. Would that the stoned, they were sawn asunder, were temptday was at hand when these shall be swept ed, were slain with the sword, destitute, afflictcompletely, and for ever, out of their way to ed, tormented, of whom the world was not worthy.' And this self-denying faith may is a person over whose early history still be witnessed, in some measure, in more a veil may well be drawn. He has been a modern times. What can the devoted missifaithful adherent of the cause for a number onary; amid the eternal snows of Greenland, after many years of laborious toil, find to fall back upon in the absence of fruit? Faith a never-lying faith! Let a like faith animate us, and as sure as to morrow's sun will gild our sin-polluted land, just as surely will ing, after a lengthened debauch, she told him, ransomed race. What a position then is ours' with tearful eyes, and choking voice, that they Co-workers with God in bringing about this must now part—she had no hope of his refor- blessed advent! May we, one and all, after such conduct and cruelty as his, and she pled Jesus: and who can tell, we may look down for her children as only a mother can, in from the upper sanctuary upon the consumburning words, wrung out from the agony of mation of our labours? One thing is certain, her crushed spirit. He left the house, but we shall rest from these, and our works shall

ALCOHOL LEADING TO IDIOCY.

Dr Howe, in his report on idiocy, to the Legislature of Massachusetts, makes the tollowing striking statement .- " The habits of the parents of three hundred of the idiots were learned, and one hundred and fortyfive, or nearly one-half, are reported as known to be habitual drunkards. Such parents, it is affirmed, give a weak and lax constitution to their children, who are consequently, deficient in Sodily and vital energy, and predisposed by their very organisation to have cravings for alcoholic stimulants, many of retorted, "Are you not ashamed to ask such cravings for alcoholic stimulants, many of a thing, after all you have wasted?" But it these children are feeble and live irregularly. others; reverse after reverse followed in rap- was not this time to be wasted; the tectotal Having a lower vitality, they feel the want of others; reverse after reverse followed in rapid succession, some of them are in the grave, whilst others of them are reduced to beggary, had resolved to join. Fearing much, yet It is upwards of seven years since I first grasping with eagerness at any chance of savsaw —. I had been sent at the instance of ing him, she gave him the money, and said a friend of his; it was a most touching scene. I that would he but take the pledge, and keep Being a young man possessed of many nature it, she would deem it one of the best spent ral amiabilities, he was frequently led away sixpences during their married life. That