surely there is not a man in the country unwilling to pay a trifle more for goods made in Canada. Seven hundred thousand wage earners work in these Canadian factories, and they and their dependents certainly have some claim to consideration. Moreover, as every other nation is armed to the teeth with tariff munitions how can Canada afford to go unarmed and become the dumping ground for foreign factories?

Within the tariff wall which keeps out foreign importations the Canadian manufacturers should compete. The suspicion that they combine instead of compete is the irritant which causes some popular dissatisfaction. Neither the farmers nor the manufacturers touched on this delicate question, but it is one of great interest to the people. The government must prevent combinations in restraint of trade and check profiteering among those who are receiving especial consideration from the government. Our people have no desire to close the factories or cripple the manufacturers. But the tariff commission should probe all have a united Street Car and Hydro sercharges of profiteering and injustice. vice under one management in Toronto. The New York Times complains that the campaign book issued by the Republican national committee does not contain a copy of the covenant of the league of nations. As the league is supposed to be the principal issue in the election one might reasonably expect to find it included in a campaign book. Evidently the committee reasoned either that every voter had already read the document or that the great majority would prefer to discuss, expound and oppose the covenant without first being put to the Public Ownership Scores.

Winnipeg Grain Growers' Guide: The municipal electric light and power plant, owned and operated by Winnipeg, has once more given a striking demonstration of the value of public ownership efficiently administered. The Winnipeg Electric Railway Co. operates three public utilities, street cars, gas service and electric light and power. On account of increasing cost of operation the company has just secured permission from the public utilities commissioner to again increase car fares and gas charges. It made no attempt, however, to secure higher rates for although the process of which a part of Meads stock for although the process of which a part of Meads stock for although the power will be carefully chosen to represent women's national interests. tempt, however, to secure higher rates for either electric power or light, and has made no claim that these services are not profitable to the company.
