Will Organize Women's Labor

Canada's Next Step Towards Winning the War; No Government Jobs For Unemployed Men; To Make Aeroplanes

Committees of women to be known as "Women's National Service Boards" are to be organized in all parts of the Dominion by the directors of National Service. The duty of these boards is to be the registration of women labor and the securing, where possible, of employment locally of such labor.

The directors feel that the temporary substitution of women for men in industrial and other occupations and the more general employment of war industrial life will help to maintain national production and promote financial stability. It will also help recruiting by releasing men from certain work.

In reference to the exemption of men of military age from enlistment because their services in the employment in which they are engaged are of more value to the state than if they were enlisted, the directors announce that any man of military age who will offer in writing to enlist will be exempted if the director of the district decides that he can be of more value to the state by continuing his employment and he will be given a badge and a certificate.

"During the war no man of military age may be appointed to either the inside or the outside civil service unless a badge has been issued to him," is the significant statement in an order-in-council which will shortly be established in Canada by the government, and in connection with the order-in-council will be made for the establishment of a factory for the construction of aeroplanes, including the motors, which hitherto have not been built in this country.

TANK TAKES REDOUBT BUT IS DESTROYED

Monster, Caught Straddling Ditch Near Le Sars, Becomes an Artillery Target

Craters Veritable Lakes; Artillery Fighting and Small German Attacks on the Somme Front, in West

(By Philip Gibbs.)

With the British armies in the field, Sunday, Oct. 8, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle from New York Times).—The men who took Le Sars are still holding it, and only short facts of their case come back from them through the mist and across the waterworks.

Last night and this morning it rained again in a drizzling way, and all the shell craters are ponds. It would be possible to swim in some of them, those scooped out by the biggest shells and linked up with others. It is not easy to get runners back across country like that. The Germans find it harder and are drowned in many of those pits, because of the British artillery fire pouring "stuf" over them.

Yet seriously it is from the Germans one learns most of the frightful drama which went on yesterday evening in Le Sars Village. They are the prisoners, 800 of them, with five officers, who were sent back to safety while the British stayed and fought on. Those from the village belong to the 21st and 32nd divisions of reserve regiments. They had been reinforced, strengthening the position, and expecting an attack by some uncanny means at the exact minute. They said that followed the attack was to be ordered to fight to the last man rather than surrender this fortress, which is one of the gates barring the long road to Bapaume. They tried machine guns and trench mortars on the British front trenches, kept their rifles dry by wrapping them in rags, and sent out volunteers and victims to lie in the shell pits, waiting for the British to come over. They knew they had a poor chance really to keep Le Sars, and their best hope of life or death was to put up a hard fight.

The British guns had already smashed the houses and barns to rubbish heaps, like those of Martinpuich and Colincette, and the 22nd, 8-inch, and other monster guns were making a worse hell of the place. The men of the German 21st and 32nd Regiments of Reserve lay low in the dugouts and tucked their heads down in their new trenches, which were built in the mill-race beyond. Their first goal on the right was one of those beastly quadrilateral redoubts called the Tangle, and after that the road from Martinpuich north eastward, and then followed the Dute Warrentourt, that old high tunnel in which the bones of some prehistoric man lay until we found the surface of our modern civilization.

The Tangle was the first check and a bone. Machine guns swept the field with bullets so that the men lay on their faces in the mud. They were just scorpions and mudcrabs wallowing in the slime, but finding an inch or two of luck in it. Another muddy thing came on its way to the Tangle, more like a primeval river hog than in the early days of its debut because of the monster tank turned its snout toward the Tangle, struggled over the choppy ground—wave upon wave of craters with high rims—until it reached a bit of deep quarry which makes a hole in the side of Le Sars. This sunken road or old quarry track was filled with German soldiers, alive and dead. The living ones flung bombs at the tank, fired rifle volleys, tried to stab it from beneath as it struggled across the trench and stayed across it, firing venomously from each flank. After that, something having happened to its internal organs, it committed harakiri, but seems to have been

FRAIL, SICKLY CHILD

St. Thomas, Ont., Father Tells How Child Was Restored to Health

We have always told the people of St. John that Vinoli is a wonderful body builder for ailing children. Here is more proof of the fact.

Robert J. Miller, of St. Thomas, Ontario, says: "The measles left my little daughter in a very weakened, run-down condition. She had a very poor appetite and was much below normal weight. On the advice of a friend I gave her Vinoli and she has gained rapidly in weight and strength. I consider Vinoli a valuable medicine for such conditions."

Vinoli is especially efficient in building up puny, weak, ailing children, because of the beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates which it contains, and as it is without oil or grease, children love to take it.

Useful before going up in a blaze of glory.

The German prisoners who faced the British in the outskirts of Le Sars and then further back in the scales road, and in hiding places below ground, say there was grim and bitter fighting there. The soldiers pay tribute to the men who captured them.

"They fought us fiercely and beat us. We could not stand up against them." Two attempts have been made by the Germans to regain a footing in the trenches they recently lost in the Thierval area. The first counterattack, delivered last night, failed before the German infantry reached the British line. The second, made at 5 o'clock this morning, enabled small parties to penetrate the British trenches, where they were taken prisoner.

SHOE PRICES MUCH HIGHER

German System of Allowing Each Citizen Two Pairs of Shoes Has Been Suggested

LEATHER SCARCITY • LARGELY RESPONSIBLE

"If you think the prices of shoes are high, why wait a few months; they aren't a flea bite compared to what they will be then." The man who said this didn't talk just for the sake of hearing himself; he had trade journals and letters from New York wholesalers to bear out the validity of his statements. His parting words to The Telegraph man were: "War or peace, the price of shoes is going up to stay up."

Leather and the component parts of shoes have been soaring since the war began and now comes the announcement that the British government has requisitioned all leather in England, Russia, like England, has felt the scarcity of leather; the deputy town council at Moscow put into effect the German ticket scheme for obtaining shoes. Two checks a year, each entitling the holder to a pair of shoes, will be given to each resident.
