The meeting was largely attended and enthusiastic. The chief speaker was Mr. Macpherson. He showed how the Japanese had driven white men from the salmon fishing industry, and declared that not more than ten per cent. of the labor in the sawmills of the province was white. Outside of British Columbia there was a lack of sympathy with the situation, and he feared that some sources within the province were fostering this class of immigration for the cheapness of the labor. He declared that he was perfectly willing to drop political lines and be classed as an agitator if by that action much good would result to the province. The passage of the Natal Act by the provincial legislature was merely a waste of time alone could act with authority. He had advised negotiations demanding that Japan should fully live up to her agreement to curtail immigration. He would Hawaii count against the total allowed from the home country.
