Richards before being sentenced said:
This thing started eighteen months ago when I was in Cumberland with a lot of travellers. I was drunk and went to sleep with $1,600 in my possession. When I awoke it was gone. I didn't say anything about it as I was afraid I would lose my position. I had a house in Fernie which I hoped to sell to make up the shortage, but the Fernie fire, eard that away from under my feet. My father was burned out in the Fernie fire, and I took more money to help him out. To do this I kept money that was paid me and held it for sixty days, and then had to make up the discounts which I had given for cash payments three months before, according to the rules of the firm. These discounts amount to about $1,000. I have offered to make restitution to the conditions are of the issues of this campaign and arce of the issues of the istandard of the rear steps.
