MORMON COLONY

STILL GROWING

People Have Founded Five Towns.

Are Frugal and Law-abiding, But Strange Belief Makes Them Undesirable Citizens.

The Mormon is a religious coloniser. For the sake of his faith, he is ever ready to obey the mandate of his superiors and move to fresh fields. For the sake of the power—political, social, religious—that is involved, he is an earnest advocate of a policy of territorial extension.

Hence it is that the Mormon power has invaded Western Canada, and is already causing some apprehension there. In the newly organized Province of Alberta, bordering the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, the Mormon stake of Zion. There eight thousand troopers from Utah are farming and ranching, and incidentally building up a strong cause of Latter Day Saints in the Dominion, as an integral part of the army of three hundred thousand that constitute the sect of the world over.

No less than eighteen hundred Mormon missionaries are scattered over the globe, zealously propagating their faith, without remuneration from the home centre. It was this ruling thought of expansion that led a small company of eight or ten families to leave Utah a few years ago, under the guidance of C. O. Card, who thus became one of the pioneers of his people on the Western Canadian plains, and who has had his reward of fame by having a town named after him.

There were a delegation appointed by the Salt Lake hierarchy to spy out the land, and their report must have been favorable, judged by the emigration that resulted and that is still under way.

A few miles north of the international boundary line Card and his company pre-empted Government lands and laid the foundations of their prairie homes. They were the first agriculturists to settle in what had up to that time been looked upon as exclusively a ranching country; in fact, it was manifestly in the interests of the settlement to circulate such a report. But the Western Mormons, who had overcome the seeming obstacles of nature in cultivating the unpromising soil of Utah, were just the type of workers to solve the problem in Alberta, and hundreds of farmers are there satisfied with the results.

Thus it happens that where, scarcely more than a decade ago, there were few signs of human occupation, and the wandering cowboy and his roving herds, now there are a score of towns and villages, each the prosperous centre of a grain and stock-raising region.

The Mormon has brought it to pass. As an industrious, law-abiding, frugal settler he is a welcome addition to Canada's Western pioneer population, where the dominant need is men, to cause the soil to bring forth its abundance, where, according to the Celtic fancy of Lord Dufferin when Governor-General of Canada, one has only "to tickle the prairie with a plow to have it laugh back with a harvest."

But many thinking Canadians are, nevertheless, not so certain about the value of this human inflow, judged by their history as a religious-political organization. In numbers the Mormons are steadily increasing in influence and wealth. The first town, Raymond, was founded in 1901. In the period since then several other populated centres have come into existence—Cardston, Magrath, Striding and Taber—each of which large districts are tributary. Heretofore Lethbridge has been the northern gateway of this Canadian Mormonland, but the movement is spreading northward in the direction of Calgary, the Town of High River having recently been started between Macleod and Calgary.

Further evidence of Mormon activity in this "Stake of Zion" under the British flag is found in their recent purchase of the famous Cochrane ranch, composed of 60,000 acres of the choicest land in Southern Alberta, for $4 an acre. A large beet sugar factory is in operation at Raymond, and this industry bids fair to be an important feature of their industrial life.

Raymond is named after a son of Jesse Knight. The latter believes his son is to be the instrument, under the guidance of Providence, of gathering together the long lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and that they will ultimately reassemble at Raymon.

Jesse Knight himself is one of the picturesque figures of the great West. Once very poor, now he is correspondingly rich, and the acquisition of his wealth is in itself a strange tale. Some years ago the old Mormon had a dream that at a certain point in the mountains he would find a mine of great value, and that he was to use its wealth for the good of mankind. In due time he discovered a treasure mine located in Canada, and in two years thereafter Knight was a millionaire. Now, in the process of evolution, he has several mines, and consequently several millions. He is also carrying out the terms of the compact by causing thousands of acres of irrigated prairie lands to be plowed for best raising, and his schemes for the benefit of his people are many and widespread. He himself works in the field like the humblest of his men, when in Alberta, and sets an example in personal life for simplicity and abstemiousness.

Cardston, is the creation of Joseph Card, a son-in-law of Brigham Young. Mr. Card is the ex-president of this Canadian "Stake of Zion," and conducts a large co-operative store, for co-operation is effective throughout Mormonism in the purchase of and communal use of steam thrashers and cheese and other factories. Surrounding Cardston are a number of smaller settlements.

A majority of the "Saints" live in village communities for the sake of the social life and the educational and religious privileges involved in such an arrangement. The church and the school constituting an important part in the life of the sect. A deep interest is taken in the schools. Excellent buildings are provided, and fair-ly well equipped teachers are secured. Wisely too, the trustees take a more than perfunctory interest in the work of the schools, by frequently visiting the schools and inspecting the work of the teachers. While they are compelled to adopt the Public school system of that part of Canada, they have steadily pursued the policy of preparing their own young people as teachers.

As a result, there are now three well equipped schools, where there are no native teachers needed, and none employed. Furthermore, they take full advantage of the law which allows a half hour of daily religious instruction, and with the schools all in the hands of Mormon teachers, as they will soon be, it will easily be seen that the educational system may be made subservient to the interests of the Church. A large church school is to be built at Raymond this fall.

In the matter of land tenure, the Mormon is anxious to take the land as they may live in a village or town. A small piece of ground is attached to each dwelling, in which garden produce is grown. Orchards, too, are being planted with good prospects of reaching maturity. The main farm, averaging about eighty acres, lies out in the territory around the settlements, and a drive in any direction will reveal what has already been accomplished by irrigation and otherwise, on land that was once declared to be useless for grain growing.

The Mormon who settled in Canada, gave a pledge to the Canadian Government that they would refrain from the practice of polygamy. Complaints were soon made that they were violating the compact, but investigation at the time proved the charges to be groundless. In 1890, however, to quiet the public unrest regarding the matter, an amendment to the criminal law of the Dominion, "made any person guilty of a misdemeanor who practiced polygamy and liable to imprisonment for five years and a fine of $200. This applies to anyone who practices polygamy or spiritual marriage or assists in any such ceremony.

Will these Mormon immigrants be Canadian and British? Many a Canadian anxiously asks. Time is necessary in which to reply. They are undoubtedly steadily increasing in numbers and are as steadily aggressive as to be expected. It is true, also, that the Gentile population in Southern Alberta is growing less, in view of the exiles proselytizing influences of their Latter Day Saint neighbors and it is equally probable that they will gain in time the corresponding loss in Parliament.

There is yet, however, no evidence that the Mormon immigrants in the West other than strictly obeying the laws of the land. Indeed they complain that they are constantly being misrepresented in the discussions that have arisen regarding their suitability as immigrants.
