Track Badly Torn Up—Train Met With Accident Near Vassalboro—Service Crippled for Several Hours.

(Bangor Commercial.)

The passengers on the St. John Express, otherwise known as Train 102, which left Bangor at 1:45 p. m., had a very narrow escape Thursday afternoon from being in a train wreck of serious proportions. This train, which is made up of nine heavy cars and was drawn by one of the big Mogul engines, was about a mile and a half west of Vassalboro, came so near being derailed that it was nothing short of a miracle that the engine and cars remained on the rails.

In some unaccountable way the forward trucks of the tender of the big engine turned and left the track, carrying up the sleepers for a distance of nearly 100 feet before the train could be stopped. The train was not running at a high rate of speed and Engineer Paul, who felt the shock as soon as the forward truck struck the sand, was able to bring the train to a standstill while the rear trucks remained on the iron. Several of the passengers and trainmen were slightly shaken up, but fortunately no one was injured.

The results of the accident were felt for miles on either side of the track and the most in the delay to traffic, as the engine was partly across the track and the sleepers torn up so that it was necessary to send a wrecking train from Waterville to get the disabled engine from the track and relay the damaged sleepers.

Trains were held up until late in the evening, although dummy trains ran east and west, carrying passengers to their destinations. The cars of the regular trains could not get by, however, until late. A big crew was put at work immediately, making temporary repairs and getting the tender back on the rails.

The engine that was hauling the train was of the latest Pacific type, one of five passenger moguls in service between Bangor and Portland. A year ago last summer, it will be recalled, a tender of one of this same type of engines jumped the track near Oakland and caused a bad smash. It has been a matter for considerable discussion as to whether the road should invest in a new engine sufficient to support such powerful machines and the trouble Thursday afternoon did not cause much surprise.

The train due here at 4:50 p. m., from Boston, arrived on time, as it was held up at Waterville, Number 19, due at 6:10, didn't get here until nearly midnight when it ran in as an extra. Passengers in this train were forwarded in a special which was hastily made up and which arrived here shortly before 8 o'clock. Night trains from the west got by all right and the regular schedule has been resumed.
