GROSS MISREPRESENTATION OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL BY THE SUN

With solemn requiem ceremonial the terred in the new Catholic cemetery Tuesday morning after an impressive service at the Cathedral. The procession from the residence of the deceased priest's parents, Courtenay street, was very lengthy and showed the esteem in which he was held. There were no pall bearers, loving hands of relatives carrying the body from the house to the hearse. A delegation of Division No. 1, A. O. H., preceded the hearse, and in the procession was a delegation from the parish of Johnville, and representatives of the parish of St. Martins.

At the entrance of the Cathedral grounds the hearse was met by a number of priests who bogs the body into the church. It was placed in the sanctuary, in front of the altar, which was heavily draped in black. A biretta and stole were paced on the casket. After the office solemn requiem mass was celebrated by Bishop Casey. Rev. J. J. O'Donovan, of the west side, was deacon, Rev. J. Laurler has asked Costigan for a statement of facts, to the forwarded to the Washington government through the British ambassage. No one is surprised at any misrepresentation which may appear in the Sun in regard to the Attorney General, but in the above the Sun seems to have surpassed all previous efforts in this line.

A Telegraph reporter called upon the Attorney General and showed him the despatch reproduced above, and was informed by Mr. Physicy that it was true that Mr. Costigan was taking steps to prevent the legislation referred to and had interviewed Sir Wilfrid Laurisy upon the sufficient. and Rew. Bishop Casey paid an eloquent tribute to the life and character of the young priest called at such an early age to lay down the work he so loved and which he Mr. Costigan was taking steps to prevent the legislation referred to and had interviewed Sir Wiffrid Laurier upon the subject.

The Attorney General who stated that he was co-operating with Mr. Costigan in the matter and on the 5th inst. he wrote to Mr. Keegan, who is now at Augusta opposing the bill, a letter, of which he gave the reporter a copy, and which is as follows:

priest called at such an early age to lay down the work he so loved and which he was so eminently fitted to carry on. The deceased, said his lordship, was a good son of St. John, one who had fulfilled the duties of his high calling with dignity and zeal.
