ST. JOHN YOUTH BADLY CRUSHED

Amherst, N. S., Dec. 3.—Arriving in Amherst on the St. John local No. 2 train badly injured, John O'Brien, a young lad from St. John, is now lying semi-conscious at his brother's home.

O'Brien who has been living in Amherst for some months enlisted with Recruiting Officer Major W. A. Fillmore, but not being of age found it necessary to have his mother's consent.

so he had to go to St. John, but as he possessed no money he had to "beat it" that city. On the return to Amherst again O'Brien rode the blind baggage on No. 10 train. Fortune, however, favored him for near Sussex he lost his foot-sold while the train was travelling forty miles an hour. The lad was badly injured and lay unconscious alongside of the road until a section crew from Sussex carried him to that town and sent him to his brother's home where he is under medical attendance. Both his feet are badly crushed and one hip bone is displaced and he has many other bruises.

REVOLTING STORY OF GERMAN CRUELTY

A revolting story of German brutality was that related by D. A. Des Lauriers, who passed through the city to his home in Montreal, direct from the battlefield. He states positively having seen a British army officer tortured in the wake of the German retreat near Lezardes about three months ago.

The news was announced in a letter received by his wife today, in which he says he has been recommended for the Victoria Cross for saving a French officer's life on the River Aisne. Watts plunged into the stream into which the officer had been thrown by his runaway horse, and under a hail of bullets brought him to shore.

Mr. Des Lauriers who was in the field in the capacity of physician said that of all the repulsive sights he witnessed this was the worst. The gruesome sight was found soon after the German had retired and the French were following up their retreat. He was among the first to see it and he said he became weakened at the revolting sight.

A rough crevice had been hewn from three trunks and the largest branch was cut and nailed crosswise. The hands of the unfortunate captive were then pierced with bayonets and pinned to the extending arms of the cross, and the blood-stained bayonets were still there. The crucifix was stretched on the ground.

In contrast to this tale, Mr. Des Lauriers related another story of how a little French lad not more than thirteen years made captives of thirty or more wine soaked Germans.

In the vicinity of Lagny, he said, the Germans believed at the first they were meeting with success, so night were met with a French force which were men of prosperous residents were raided. In one of these mansions all the officers and a family with the exception of a little boy were driven from the house. He was kept.

They drank loud and heartily of the rich old beverages and as a result, became physically incapacitated. In the early morning the little lad went around to each of the officers and they all were taken to come and make prisoners of the officers, which they did. The officers were taken to the French lines and there the story of the capture spread quickly until it was being told all along the French lines.

Mr. Des Lauriers left for Montreal last night.
