

ministers in the arms of faithful prayer; and in your closets, around the family altar, and in the social and public means of grace, never tire in your supplications that God may bless His servants; that the Word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified; and the ends of the earth see the salvation of our God together.

It is with gratitude we record that your prayers in the past, have not remained unanswered. God has visited us during the year with showers of blessing, and we are gratified to be enabled to report an increase of 570 meeting in Church fellowship, with an addition to the general receipts, that strengthens our hands and cheers our hearts. Yet so many are our present fields of labor, and so pressing are the demands to enter new ones, that the requirement for even increased liberality is most urgent, that we may follow the leadings of Divine Providence and fulfil the purposes of our God.

Our Conference, on the whole, has been a good one, and we return to our Stations, whether old or new, animated by the desire to labor among you with increased acceptance and usefulness, earnestly requesting your most active co-operation, that we may win souls for Christ, build up Zion's walls, and extend the principles of truth and righteousness through the world.

Address to the English Conference.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN,

From this distant land we once more fraternally greet you as fellow heirs with us of the Kingdom of God, and as co-laborers in the Master's service, having the same charge with ourselves to preach the everlasting Gospel, and "feed the flock of God which he hath purchased with His own blood."

While reviewing the past, we cannot fail to see, that the good hand of the Lord our God has been upon us for good, guiding us in the way, protecting us from danger, comforting us under those afflictions and chastenings to which all who are His, are subjected, for their profit; and giving us delightful evidences that He is blessing us in our work. We are well assured that such happy recollections of the Divine presence and blessing will also be gratefully cherished by you in your annual gathering.

From the reports laid before us, from the several districts, it is clear that our societies are generally living in peace; our members, with certain exceptions, are pressing on in the way of Life, and we have no
