Flying sparks and embers from a burning building often cause roofs near by to catch fire, especially in a dry, hot season. Under like conditions, roofs covered with

Brantford Asphalt Roofing

are in no danger from flying embers, because any that fall on Brantford Asphalt Roofing die out harmlessly. Build a bonfire on a roof of Brantford Asphalt Roofing and the fire will not spread and the boards underneath the roofing will be protected in a surprising manner.

If a fire starts in the interior of a building Brantford Asphalt Roofing acts as a retardant and keeps the fire from spreading. Fire chiefs and insurance companies endorse its use in the most congested cities.

Brantford Asphalt Roofing does not absorb water, but sheds the heaviest rain with ease. Acid proof and alkali proof. Reliable, durable, economical. Three weights—60 lb., 70 lb., 80 lb. per square.

Brantford Rubber Roofing

is the same quality as Brantford Asphalt, but has a smooth, rubbery surface instead of the sand. It is particularly suitable for veranda decks and floor coverings. Three weights—40 lb., 50 lb., and 60 lb. per square.

Standard Mohawk Roofing

is made of the same materials as Brantford Asphalt Roofing, but is lighter in weight. A thoroughly reliable roofing at a low price. Tested for years and has given entire satisfaction. Sanded on one side. One weight—40 lbs. per square.

Mohawk Rubber Roofing

The same quality as Standard Mohawk but with a smooth surface. Used for all classes of temporary work—sheds, bunk-houses, camp sites, even dugouts in the trenches. 45 lb., 45 lb., and 55 lb. weights.

Leatheroid Roofing

Slightly lower quality than Mohawk Rubber. Used for same purposes. 45 lb., 45 lb., and 55 lb. weights.

Samples of any of these roofings and prices will be furnished on request.

Letters to NewsRecord

A REPLY TO MR. MCKAY'S LETTER.

To the Editor:

In Tuesday's issue of your esteemed paper, Mr. J.F. MacKay moralizes on the virtues of moderation and of personal liberty. What he seems to be mostly concerned about though is the matter of indulgence in alcoholics. In contrast to his effusion is the book written by Vance Thompson in which he takes up the question of the moderate drinker.

We have all met this important person, the moderate drinker. Never a person who sang the praise of wine and abused the "unscientific twaddle" of the enemies of alcohol but who quoted scripture and who knew of extended and learned personages who lived "to be within four months of a hundred" and "never drank less than a bottle of port every day of his life." This is the famous moderate drinker. You meet him everywhere. Sometimes he is indeed old; much more usually he is young; but there is one extraordinary thing about him—always he is going downstairs. Always he is getting away from that ideal state of his; and if you meet him to-morrow or next month or next year, he has ceased to be, in some appreciable degree, as moderate a drinker. This is not an assumption. It is a fact.

The New York Sun editorially said, "the evils of moderate drinking have not been established to the satisfaction of any but a few reformers," and then with less irony continues, "what does seem to be pretty well established is that few of those who drink can be classed as moderate drinkers."

Bernard Shaw has pointed out that as many "people seem to prefer the boozey sort of life" so "society is organized to suit boozey people." Life insurance officers used to accept this situation and as late as 1840 and in many cases even later, obliged total abstainers to pay ten per cent more than the ordinary premium because "they were thin and watery and mentally cranked in that they repudiated the good things of God as found in alcoholic drinks."

But three quarters of a century has swept the cobwebs of medical and financial ignorance from the minds of the heads of life insurance companies, among others.

At the convention of the presidents of Life Insurance Companies held in New York in 1914, the chairman of the Central Bureau of Medical-Actuarial Mortality Investigation representing forty-three companies and covering the records of over two million policy holders, made a report in which he classed moderate drinkers as "decidedly unsafe and exhibiting a higher mortality than total abstainers." The report (published in the Outlook) furthermore said, "With regard to men who have used alcoholic beverages daily, but not to excess, the experience of the companies was divided into two groups: (a) men who took two glasses of beer, or a glass of whiskey, or their equivalent a day, (b) men who took more than the foregoing amount, but were not considered by their companies to drink to excess. The mortality in the second group was fifty per cent greater than in the first." These are plain facts, Mr. Editor, and for fear of trespassing upon your space it would be interesting to hear more from "big business" as presented by the great Life Insurance Companies.

The defenders of booze even to the extent of the "moderate drinker" are fighting a losing battle. The relationship of "boozers" makers and the Hum has been pretty clearly established in the exposure in the U.S. during the last year. Henry Ford will take drinkers of alcoholics out of his plant and try to reform them and if he can't get them to quit, removes them. The Railroad Companies employ only on-drinking men. So do many other large business concerns. The American Car and Foundry Company have gone so far that they will employ no man who ever signed a liquor dealer's application for license, showing thus a sneaking kindness for the thing, even though he does not drink it himself. These and hundreds of other companies, organizations, etc., are lining up with the economic law and with the best thought of the day.

How long can the moderate drinker face successfully this battle line? Our British leaders in industry are greatly exercised lest they lose out their alcoholic handicap against a competition that excludes "boozers." Even a prizefighter like "Fess Willard" writes smashing arguments for total abstinence from alcoholic drink.

It is well known that the baseball players are total abstainers if they wish to be successful like "Ty" Cobb, Collins, Barry and "Home Run Baker." The press almost everywhere reads like an old fashioned temperance exhortation.

And so on could the tale unfold. The world is entering the sober way of life. And the moderate drinker must face about and march with it—or be left behind, among the defective, the ineffective, exiles from their generation.

Mr. MacKay has mentioned the Lutheran church. Read what Martin Luther says in his "Table Talk": "Whoever first brewed beer has prepared a pest for Germany. I have prayed to God that he would destroy the whole brewing industry. I have often pronounced a curse on the brewer. All Germany could live on the barley that is spoiled and turned into a curse by the brewer."

So also could be quoted from many Roman Catholic and Anglican authorities but space forbids. My object in writing Mr. Editor, is not to stir up animosity or controversy. But we have hundreds of boys in this city who read your paper and it is wrong for those fellows to get the impression that moderate or any other kind of alcoholic drinking is harmless. Too many moderate drinkers now are the one legged man in the race. We must see to it that our boys get a fair shake in life. Society is no longer "organized for boozey people." The entire social fabric is trying to clean away the alcoholic dust and rust which have clogged and befouled and hampered it, so that young men are no longer thrown on the trash heap by alcohol and there await death to compassionately take them when economically there is no place for them.

Re personal liberty as mentioned by Mr. MacKay that will hold for another time.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I am

Yours
Edgar D. Heist.

CLAIMS THERE IS A SLUM
To the Editor:—The people living near the Lang tannery hereby invite the citizens of Kitchener to come and see the slum in the streets, caused by its using the streets as a backyard.

I claim it is a nuisance and a disgrace to the city, which will make a bad impression on strangers visiting the vicinity.

Yours truly,
PETER SAUGEL

Absorption Process Makes Faces Young

Success at last has come to scientists who for years have sought some method of removing the outer veil of facial skin in cases of snarled complexion, which would be both painless and harmless. The new process is so simple, so inexpensive, the wonder is no one had discovered it long ago. It has been applied to the face of a woman who had been covered by a thick, yellowish, waxy (sold by druggists in ounce packages) entirely removed, by gentle absorption, the weathered, flaking surface skin, showing the youthful, rosy skin beneath. The was applied at night, like cold cream, and washed off in the morning. The absorber also cleanses clogged pores, increasing the skin's breaking capacity and preserving color and natural beauty of the new skin. A simple and harmless wrinkle-remover which has also proved quite successful in making a face look like a baby. All one need do is to dissolve an ounce of powdered absorber in a half pint of warm water and bathe the face in the solution once a day for awhile. After the very first application the finer lines disappear and the deeper ones soon follow.
