

Proving by Actual Experiment

This experiment will always interest the children, and will prove a good deal of thinking. The explanation, of course, is, that the lighted piece of paper which is inserted into the inverted glass drives out most of the air, so that, when the mouth of the glass is quickly put down into the water there is very little air, and, consequently, very little pressure above the water within the glass. Hence, the weight or pressure of the air on the water outside the glass drives the water up into the glass to occupy the space from whence the air was driven by the burning paper.

A practical demonstration of this kind is always more convincing than any mere statement. This is particularly true of medical remedies.

The effect of the anti-toxin treatment for diphtheria is noticeable within a few hours, so that everyone must believe in its virtue. In a similar way, the treatment known as ORANGE LILY gives a practical proof of the progress it is making in curing women's disorders, and that, too, within a few days after commencing its use.

All authorities agree that in every case of women's disorders there exists a congested condition of the womanly organs. The circulation in these parts is sluggish or stagnant, and the result is that the broken-down tissue or waste matter which should be carried off if the blood was circulating freely, remains in these parts, causing inflammation, irritation, oppression of the nerves, etc. ORANGE LILY is not taken internally, but is applied direct to the suffering organs. It is absorbed into the circulation, and its antiseptic properties at once act on the waste matter referred to above. The consequence is that this waste matter, which is causing the inflammation, ulcers, nervous troubles, etc., begins to be discharged, and it continues to be discharged until all the foreign matter is removed from the circulation. At the same time the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, the nervous trouble disappears, the circulation is restored and good health follows.

Toronto, Ont., June 2, 1909.
Dear Mrs. Currah.—I wish to tell you that Orange Lily is doing me a great deal of good. Those ulcers come away one or two every week, and I have less pain and fewer headaches. I feel sure I will be perfectly cured in a little longer time.

MRS. D. S. T.

The explanation of the wonderful cures performed by ORANGE LILY is very simple. It is a scientific remedy, based on the discoveries of Pasteur and Lister. The conditions existing in all female troubles are alike in character, differing in degree and development only, so that a positive remedy, as ORANGE LILY is, acts with all the certainty of a chemical experiment. In order to convince every suffering woman that ORANGE LILY will cure her, I make the following:

wards raising him to a higher moral level? Do you think a young man who has a good mother, sister, wife or girl friend has more chance of keeping straight than a man who is alone in the world, and has no one to care whether he goes "to the dogs" or not? Come, boys, give us your opinions. You probably have known girls of different kinds—and I really want to know very badly. Patient Editor, I hope I have not asked too many questions. ### Farmer and Hired Help

Sask., March 16th, 1913.

Dear Editor: I will try my luck once more. I have read with great interest for a number of years the many pages of excellent reading in your valuable magazine. My opinion is that it is the best paper to be had in Canada to-day at any price, and I would not be without it for a good deal. I read in your March number a letter from "Brightside," and I think he struck a good subject for lots of debate. It is true that there are many marriages, and married men and women of to-day, who marry for nothing but the business part of it. The man looks at it from his standpoint of view. He is tired of batching and living alone, and looks for a wife, and often the one he marries is one who is willing to take the first chance that comes along, and sell her life to the man merely for a home. It would be far better for a woman like this to go through life single than to live a life full of drudgery, and not enjoying herto nine hours a day are given the usual holidays, and have Sundays to themselves. After the day's work is over there are not half a dozen cows to milk, pigs to feed, and a dozen of other odd chores. Then the farmer wonders what is the matter with his hired help. It is quite true that the farmer must have some one to do the chores, but let him turn out and help and give his man a holiday, and a horse and rig, once in a while. Do not treat him like a slave and work him from ten to twelve hours a day in the field, from four to five more hours choring, and then expect an ideal man, willing to help in everything that comes along. Hoping, Dear Editor, that I have not taken up too much of your valuable space and time. Now, girls, don't be shy. I will leave my address with the editor, and will gladly answer all letters coming my way.

A Western Guy.

The Ideal Wife

Lewis Creek, B.C., March, 1913.

Dear Editor and Reader: I have been long an interested reader of your correspondence column, and have enjoyed some of the letters very much. A subject has been under discussion very often in my presence, and I wonder just what views our Western Home Monthly readers have on the subject. We find so very many men who seem to judge their wives and women in general on just how many cows they can milk, or how many rows of potatoes they can hoe, and, in self in any way. But then there is the other side of marriage to look at, where people marry who love each other, and are both willing to sacrifice anything for each other's sake. They will live a happy life, and those are the people who go to prove that marriage is in the greater part a success.

In regard to the hired man question I think that most of the farmers in this western country are to blame. They hire a man, expect him to be up between four and five o'clock, chore till breakfast, and work in the fields all day, and after supper chore till eight or nine and in many cases later. The farmer says he has an easy time riding an implement all day and can do lots of chores. The man is often more tired after being in the field all day riding over stones and rough land, than if he was at some other job with twice as much manual labor. When a holiday comes the farmer expects him to work on, and if he does take a day off he is either docked in his wages or has the time to put in when he is through. On Sunday he has to do chores a big part of the time, and if he asks for a horse and rig the farmer is never willing to give him one. I do not say that this is the way with every farmer. Sometimes you will find one just the opposite, and who can always get along with his men; while the others are looking for men half the time. If the farmers would change their ways and treat their hired men as they should, there would be very little trouble between the two. Now in the city most of the hired help who put in from eight fact, how good a hired man she can make of herself. Now, it has been my experience to find that the more a woman works outside the more the home is neglected, and she cannot both work outdoors and indoors and do both justice, one or other must suffer. Now, do not think for a minute that I am too nice to work out, for I have done so many times, and expect to again, when necessity demands it, and in fact am always willing to help a little. But what I am most emphatically against is woman neglecting the home duties, year in and year out, rushing in to prepare a half cooked meal, only cleaning the house when one can no longer wade through the debris, etc., etc. Does man consider that an ideal wife, and home life? And yet we hear men say that's the kind of wife to have, one that will help you. Certainly you want one that will help you, every one of you; but tell me readers of the Western Home Monthly, what are your views in how she can help you. By keeping home a place to look forward to coming to, a truly haven of rest, a wife willing to help outdoors when occasion demands it; or is your ideal wife the one willing to work shoulder to shoulder with the hired man, and home certainly not a place to be proud of, for its neatness or attractiveness? Let us hear from you men every one of you; dancing, card playing, etc., have been very well threshed out. Let me change the subject to the one very much nearer our hearts. I will sign myself
