SATURDAY OCTOBER 26.

ONE OF DAVIN'S BEST.

Perhaps one of the finest oratorical gems that ever fell from the lips of the brilliant Davin was his address to the Strathcona Horse at Ottawa in March, 1900, saying:

"No knight ever wore on his sleeve the badge of truer or nobler lady than she for the completeness of whose diadem each one of you has entered the lists. For Canada you can say to the Empire, 'This is our gift,' these are the men we send, steady where bullets hail or shrapnel rend, patient under privation, in rain or storm, ready to drudge, to watch, in silence, to bear repressed ardour, but when the word to close is given, whether by bugle, or passed silently by touch, springing eagerly to the charge. My western comrades, I pray God to be your shield and strength to fill your hearts with that valor which strikes home, but is full of pity and kindness for the beaten foe. I pray you may all return if you return. I know you will return to a grateful country, with a consciousness of duty done, the master note of our achievements—and if you fall, what nobler fate could await any man than to die in battle for such a cause, fighting as our fathers fought, dying as our fathers died, but to-day with the seats and thrones and galleries of the Empire looking down on him, and sanctifying the battle-couch of blood with blessings and songs of triumph and tears."

HAPPENED RIGHT IN THE FAMILY.

London Spare Moments.

The cross-examiner was a smart man, whose object was to discredit the witness and discredit his testimony.

"What did you say your name was?" was the first question.

"Michael Doherty,"

"Michael Doherty, eh? Now, Doherty, answer this question carefully. Are you a married man?"

"O! think so, O! was married."

"So you think because you got married that you are a married man, do you? Now, tell me whom you married."

"Who O! married? O! married a woman."

"Now don't you know better than to trifle with the court? Of course you married a woman; did you ever hear of anyone marrying a man?"

"Yes, most sister did."

REFERENCE TO THE DEAD.

Ottawa Union.

"Of the dead say nothing but what is good."

This excellent proverb, which has come down to us through many ages, like most excellent things, admits of considerable qualification. It has been said with truth that it is a pity that the demonstrations of esteem made after death did not more frequently take place during the lifetime of the honored one. In very many cases, abuse during life is compensated for by indiscriminating eulogy after death. One cannot help thinking that a happy mean of frank and kindly criticism, both before and after death, would be an improvement on this. It is true that death and thus preventing him from defending his motives and actions calls for additional care and charity in criticism, but there is no reason why it should blind us altogether to his faults.

PURE GALL.

Bobbygon Independent.

There is no business in existence that is so much run up by people of gall, as that of newspapering. A newspaper is conducted like every other business, to obtain a profit. It has a certain quantity of space which it offers to the public for advertising purposes, at a certain rate. That

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be. This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured Mrs. Frances Blomfield, Pembroke, Ont., Benj. Webb, Clinton, Ont., and W. A. Nant, Belleville, Ont. All of whom suffered greatly from dyspepsia. Mrs. Blomfield writes, "I am fully cured. My appetite is restored, my system is healthy and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise it too highly for the good it has done me."

SORE NECK

Take Scott's Emulsion for scrofula. Children often have sores on the neck that won't heal up. The sores may come and go. Parents may not know what the matter nor what to do. Scrofula is the trouble and Scott's Emulsion is the medicine.

Scott's Emulsion heals the sores. But that is not all. Scrofula leads to consumption. This is the real danger.

Scott's Emulsion is the "ounce of prevention" that keeps off consumption.

We'll send you a little try, if you like.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, Toronto.

space is what it has to sell, and make its living. A grocer has teas and sugars for sale, the clothier has clothing to sell. Let any one enter a shop and ask for ten or twelve pounds of tea, or a suit of clothes, and say he will be pleased to take it as a compliment, and he would be kicked out or arrested as a lunatic. Yet the number of people who will ask for the use of the paper's space, to put money in their pockets, is a marvel. Local leeches are too numerous for any paper to speak of, and the number of coil factors in the endeavor to play the people of the province for fools is legion.

"DAY AND NIGHT" ACHES

The incessant grind of the kidney back-ache soothed and cured by South American Kidney Cure—it never fails.

"Kidney Disease affected my back so that I couldn't work at all, and could not sleep for the pain. I used the bottles of South American Kidney Cure, and I can positively add another to the long list of cures that this great remedy has effected. I can work fourteen hours a day now and not feel tired. I had tried other treatments but got no help from them."

James Sullivan, Chatham.
It relieves in six hours.

PNY-BALSAM cures all coughs. It soothes, it heals, it cures quickly and certainly. Pny-Balsam sells more widely every year. Manufactured by the proprietors of Perry Davis' Pain-Killer.

A SERIES OF SIDELIGHTS

EDITED BY HELEN HALL.

MME. PATTI'S FIRST APPEARANCE.

The following story would seem to be entirely characteristic of the great diva. The late Benjamin Wilkins, of St. Louis, was fond of telling it. As he was a life-long friend of Madam Bernardine Patti, mother of Adeline, it is probably the true version of the "first appearance."

After an unusual severe winter in St. Louis, the accumulated snow and ice, owing to a sudden thaw, caused a great flood, which entirely inundated the poorer portion of the town. Mr. Wilkins interested himself in arranging an entertainment for the benefit of the people made homeless by it. Madam Patti readily agreed to appear, but insisted that, to ensure success, there should be some novelty, as her singing was an old story. Adeline was at this time a little girl, giving promise of future greatness by singing like a bird. She happened to be sitting on Mr. Wilkins' knee, busily engaged in going through his pockets, as was her invariable custom. "Very well," said Mr. Wilkins, "you will have a novelty, Adeline. If you will sing at my concert, I will give you a whole box of candy." Adeline consented.

In those days things in St. Louis were less formal than they are now, and on the night of the concert the artists who were to appear sat in the front row of the hall, and stepped upon the platform to do their turn. Among them sat Adeline, in a white frock, her hair braided in a long braid tied with scarlet ribbons. Her eyes fairly snapped with excitement. She was a little paler than usual, but not with fear. When a third of the program had been given, Mr. Wilkins stepped upon the stage. "Ladies and gentlemen, I take great pleasure in announcing that the next number on the program will be a song by 'the youngest prima donna in the world.'"

There was a round of applause, then a pause. "Come, Adeline," said Mr. Wilkins. Adeline's mother gave her an encouraging push, but Adeline did not budge. "Where's my candy?" she said, clearly and distinctly. There was a laugh, in which Mr. Wilkins joined. "Oh, that will be all right, Adeline," he said. "You shall have your candy all right."

Adeline then stepped forward, and sang the song. It was a song of a young girl who had forgotten to supply the required box, but assured Adeline she should have it the first thing in the morning. Persuasion, entreaty, and mind, were unavailing. In Adeline's mind the proper arrangement of a program was "candy first, song second."

In the end, the audience had to wait until a messenger was despatched for the candy. Then, and then only, did Adeline sing the song, and, candy in hand, fulfil her part of the contract.

"SO HERE, THEN, ARE DREAMS."

The Roycrofters have gotten out a new book. It comes under the title, "So Here, Then, Are Dreams," by Olive Schreiner. The title is an invention of the "pastor," I imagine, because when the work was published some ten years ago, a single word did duty for the title, and that the most intangible, seductive and suggestive of all words in the language—"Dreams." I do not find the addition an improvement. The work consists of eleven pieces, sketches, allegories, etc., fantastically and poetically conceived by the author of "An African Farm," and through the medium of her strong and verile prose given to the world.

"The Lost Joy," an allegory of the "Meeting of Life and Love," and of the birth of Joy. Of joy lost in the wilderness of the world, and of the advent of a stranger, wide-open-eyed, soft-voiced child, whom the two notice not at first in their grief over the loss of their radiant first-born, but who, "grave, sweet, tender thing, warm in the coldest snows, brave in the dreariest deserts," they learn to love more than the radiant-eyed first-born whom they have wept, and the perfect love is a tender little sketch full of suggestion and felicitous in expression. Other pieces are "A Dream of the Wild Rose," "In a Far-off World," "Three Dreams in a desert," and "A truly perfect vision of 'The Garden of Pleasure,' where Duty walks with desolation feet."

The book is the Roycrofters' gift to us is a delight. In a meadow of margin the stream of prose wanders happily, the title page and decorative frontispiece both involving figure devices, with arabesques, are designed by "S. Jerome," as are the initials, ornaments and borders which appear on a few pages. All of the decorative work is printed in a chocolate brown ink. The binding is dark brown, color boards, with white side stamp, the back of green leather—tasteful and effective, all in a stroke-colored crepe paper wrapper, and all "done into a printed book under the supervision of Andrew Andrews—Hon. Roycrofters."

WHAT'S WORSE.

Rivalling in popularity the largest on ready-to-wear hats, is the large, fluffy rosette. This is seen on many of the hats with a ruff finish and, a wide brim. The rosette is placed on the left front, there being little or no trimming in addition. White is the most popular color for these rosettes.

In spite of all that has been said about the general unbecomingness of the long coat with the half-fitting back, it has evidently come to stay for this winter at least. In the larger American cities all the new coats are of this pattern. When worn unbuttoned they certainly are most unbecoming, but when buttoned on a good figure, they are quite stylish.

A satin collar and large satin rosette of the same color, make a pretty trimming for a plain shirt waist. The rosette is worn half way between the collar and the belt.

It is reported from Paris that white gowns are to be most favored for evening wear this season, all on account of the Czarina's preference for white. Beautiful white costumes were made for the wives of the high French officials to wear at the reception given to the Czar and Czarina and the result was a revelation of the possibilities of all white gowns. So the die is cast, and the craze for white has set in to the extent that a white court is predicted in England.

Rather short sash ends with loops, or a soft rosette finish at the waist line, are one feature of the new dress gowns. They are usually made of soft silk, drawn in with a ruffled finish at the end, and attached either at one side of the front, or directly in the back.

So many shades of red are to be worn this season than many women seem to be laboring under the impression that plum shades are back again, too. But that is hardly the case, as the new reds range from the bright or wine shades to the tints of crimson purple, the red with plenty of yellow in it being the prevailing thing.

A reform is contemplated in mourning apparel for children, which will do away with black gowns, and substitute all white in their place, a large bow on the child's hat being the only touch of black.

Silk embroidered buttons are one of the novel features of the new shirt waists, and they come in all colors to match the material.

Wedge shoes have a new shade which appears in many of this season's fabrics. However, the woman with a poor complexion must beware of it as it is a trying shade.

Anti-length walking skirts are in use more than ever before. Many of the skirts are unlined and as they do not touch the pavement, no protector is required.

A childless home is a cheerless home. The maternal instinct exists in every woman, and when it is ungratified she is deprived of much of the happiness of life. It often happens that childlessness is due to some cause which can be removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The vigor and vitality which this medicine imparts to the delicate womanly organs, put them in a condition of normal health, the lack of which is often the sole obstruction to maternity. Every woman should read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book containing 1000 pages and 700 illustrations. It is sent entirely free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing and customs. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper volume, or 50 stamps for cloth covered. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 603 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

"I'm thinking of doing a little speculating," said the lamb. "What's the best thing to put your money in?" "A safe deposit vault," replied the old bird.

He—It may be for you, but it will take me a year yet to pay the bills.
