MACAULAY CLUB

The Macaulay Club held a splendid meeting Saturday night, and decided that Pitt the younger did more for England than Walpole. Mr. Collins, in giving his decision for the affirmative, said that had the question been which was the greater statesman, he would have had to decide for Walpole, but he thought that on the question as stated the affirmative had presented the heavier arguments.

The feature of the evening was Dr. T. K. Holmes' address on Venice. The Doctor's talk was very much appreciated and was listened to with great interest. He gave a short history of Venice from its founding to the present day, describing its situation, its people and its waterways.

The debate was: Resolved that Pitt the younger did more for England than did Walpole. The affirmative cause was championed by A. E. Jewett, J. M. Pike, Fred Stone, Dr. T. K. Hol, A. E. Galbraith and J. W. Aitken, while the negative was supported by Thos. Scullard, C. E. Beeston, J. W. Young, Harry Stevens and H. W. Anderson.

J. S. Lane acted as critic.
