There ain't no use objectin' when the clouds begin to spread their wings, like flocks of vultures, hoverin' gloomy overhead. For back of all this townin' there's a strip o' gleamin' blue. Behind this pile o' blackness there's a hope for me an' you!

There ain't no use o' weepin' for the dream o' long ago. For the songs o' love that men're keeps forever on the bow. Just raise your eyes with hopin', an' in to-morrow's smile you'll see dear faces waitin' for you comin' after while.

There ain't no use o' mopein' an' a-stoppin' by the way. Where the shadows gather darkly—where no joy it sunbeams play. When you might as well be movin' toward the broad an' open plain. Where the darkness darts not follow, where the light looks forth again!
