Conservatives have endorsed the prin oiple of government ownership of railways. In that way they are abreast of the best economic thought. That under present circumstance they modified their attitude to such an extent as to approve of the guarantee of bonds was due to the neces sity of immediate construction, which the government could not undertake ecause of lack of the necessary orcanization and its lack of assets. It is regrettable that these provinces which offer splendid opportunities for the experiment of public ownership should be deterred from action be cause of their inability to finance the undertakings. For this the autonomy legislation is responsible.
