NO GREAT MEN WANTED.

Their Custom.

"Victor Hugo was once one of your pabus, I believe," said a French writer, M.
anche, to Brassier, a barber of Paris, dust yes," answered the burber. The ord and the accent surprised the inquirer, Vas it not agreeable, then, to have the reatest man in France—the greatest poet his century, perhaps—for a customer!"
be barber shripped his shoulders, "Ah.

always has been, and probably always will be, two classes of mechanics—those who stand at their bench and go through the manual motions of their work like automatic machines, with little more conception, of why the results are as they are; and the other, that class of men who make no moves without knowing why and how results are obtained, and the relative importance of each step. This is the mechanical education that counts, the education that schools the mind to a clear comprehension of principles, equally with details, and leads unfailingly to that higher field where skill, diligence and marked ability find their natural level. The young man who, on being inning his mechanical education, realizes and acts upon these truths, will develop that ability which is not gauged by mero manual dexterity, but rather that which, when in later years he may be called to definity and the second of the sign, lay out, and superintend the work of others, will enable him to creditably fill the position. Such positions come to those who bring thought and brains as well as manual dexterity to assist them in their work. To such men we owe the improvements of the age in every branch of mechanics." other men." Then, in order to justify in paradox, he related a chapter of personal experience.
"One day a great lady, Mme. de X—, whose hair I had dressed, and who was much pleased with my work, said she would recommend me to thirty or more of her friends; and in a day or two she sent me a paper containing all the names and addresses of these people, with her recommendation of me at the bottom."
"The recommendation of Mme. de X—I why, that was as good as a fortune to you, my good man," said M. Planche.
"It might have been, sir, but for M. Victor Hugo. He was here the day I received it; he had sat down in the very chair you are sitting in now. I had just put a towel round his neck, when he seemed to be seized with some great thought and beek-oned me to let him alone. He drew a pencil from his pocket, took a sheet of paper from this table here and began writing.
"He had been writing about five minutes when another customer came in. My men were all busy, so, seeing that M. Hugo had stopped writing to sharpen his pencil, I stepped up to him and said:
"M. Hugo, if you will permit me to begin with you—I am in a hurry."
"Um! I'm in a hurry, too, said he.
"Then he got up all at once, paper and pencil in hand, and started out of the shop. I called after him that he had the towel round his neck, and he took it off. But I den't know what it was.
"But in the afternoon I wanted the paper."

It was so. I rushed away to M. Hugo's se to recover the precious paper.
'Ah, yes,' he said, 'I remember; I had sooner got into the house than I had ander and much better idea, and as I had, refore, no further need of your paper,

"'Threw it into the fire?"
"'I am sorry to say I did!" MARVELOUS COURAGE.

MARVELOUS COURAGE.
Unparalleled Coolness of an Innocent Man on the Gallows.

In a handsome mansion situated in a lonely part of England there resided, a few years ago, a maiden lady of considerable wealth, writes a correspondent of the Philadelphia Press. One morning she was discovered foully murdered. Her manservant, named Lee, was suspected, arrested and convicted on circumstantial widence, and sentenced to be hanged. So who was a suspected, and sentenced to be hanged. So who was a suspected, and we will be a suspected to be removed. The day of the public to induce he Home Secretary to exercise executive between the part of the public to induce he Home Secretary to exercise executive having arrived, the prisoner was led forth to an arrived, the prisoner was slik and memp, had been, as is customary in such class, tested with the aid of sand-hars and at the texture of which was sink and pp, had been, as is customary in such eas, tested with the aid of sand-bags, and s net tound wanting. The boit was awn and the prisoner was given a drop of it feet. The rope broke. The prisoner keet, unaded, up the steps leading to scaffold, and after the rope had been always in on the noise adjusted the holt.

to also the nervousness of the hangman, assisted the latter in once more fixing the rope. The prisoner placed himself on the trup-door, the bolt was pulled, and the orderined man dropped once more out of the trup-door, the bolt was pulled, and the orderined man dropped once more out of the trup-door, the bolt was pulled, and the orderined man dropped once more out of the trup-door, the rope parted for the third time. Or considerable delay Lee once more piaced himself into the executioner's hands, but that personage and the other officials, horrified at what seemed a Divine interposition, refused to proceed further with the business. The facts were reported to the Home Secretary, who at once respited the prisoner, condemning him to imprisonment for life.

delphia Telegraph was recently looking at some models in the National Museum of curious cars used in the early days of railroading in this country, when Mr. Watkins, the curator, pointed out one particular one that had a mast and sail. Experiments with such cars were made on the Baltimore & Ohio road and on the South Carolina road. It was then a serious question whether the motive power on railroads would be sail, horse or steam. The steam locomotive was still looked upon as an experiment. Sail cars are used to-day on a guano railroad on the island of Malden, in the south Pacific. They are, in fact, used nearer home than that, for railroad men at Barnegat beach, when the wind is favorable, frequently ride over the road or construction cars—sloop-rigged. "The wind has a good deal to do with railroading even to-day," Mr. Watkins said. If you go to the bureau of intelligence at the Broad street station, Philadelphia, and ask whether some train, say from New York, is likely to be on time, you may be informed that it is likely to be four or five minutes late, because there is a strong wind from the west. Winds make considerable difference in the running time of trains. ing time of trains.

A NORTH CARCLINA GAME.

How a Little Compulson Forced the Pinia' at the Kissing Bee.

Back in the North Carolina mountains the student of customs may still find material for research, says the Washington Post. The most unique are the kissing games, which cling to the soil. Alto to big-limbed, powerful young men and apple-cheeked, buxom girls gather and select one of their number as master of ceremonies. He takes his station in the center of the room, while the rest pair off and parade around him. Suddenly one young woman will throw up her hands and say:

"I'm a-pinin'."

The master of ceremonies takes it up and broke his leg at the knee. The master of ceremonies takes it up an the following dialogue and interlocution takes place:

"Miss Arabella Jane Apthorp say she's a-pinin'. What is Miss Arabella Jane Apthorp a-pinin' fur!"
"I'm a-pinin' fur a sweet kiss."
"Miss Arabella Jane Apthorp says she's a-pinin' fur a sweet kiss. Who is Miss Arabella Jane Apthorp a-pinin' fur a sweet kiss frum!"

The scheme for the federation of the Australian colonies has been unanimous-

Arabella Jane Apthorp a-pinin' fur a sweet kiss frum!'

"I'm a-pinin' fur a very sweet kiss frum Mr. Hugh Waddle." (Blushes, convulsive giggles and confusion on the part of Miss Arabella Jane Apthorp at this forced confession.) Mr. Hugh Waddle walks upmanfully and relieves the fair Arabella's "pinin'." by a smack which sounds like a three-year-old steer drawing his hoof out of the mud.

1. Watch for the passage of the train by the large white mile posts with black figures upon them, and divide 3,600 by the time in seconds between posts; the result is the speed in miles per hour.

2. Listen attentively until the ear distinguishes the click, click, click of the wheel as, it passes a rail joint. The number of clicks upon one side of the car in twenty seconds is the speed in miles per hour, where the rails are thirty feet in length, and this is the case generally.
