IMITATION OF HARDWOODS.

17, 24, 25, 30, 32.

How Furniture Manufacturers Meet a Contingency.

Perhaps no set of men appreciate the seriousness of the timber supply ques-

Perhaps no set of men appreciate the seriousness of the timber supply question more than those engaged in the manufacturers of furniture. They have realized for some years that a pinch in the hardwood market is sure to come, and they have succeeded in coping with the situation by the economical use of material by the practice of veneering, and the imitation of the highest-priced hardwoods.

During the last few years the great increase in the price of hardwoods has created a strong demand for wood which can be used in imitation. The two woods that are most successfully imitated, according to the New York Evening Post, are mahogany and oak, particularly the quartered oak in the golden and darker finishes. Almost without exception the manufacturer markets these imitations either as imitations or under some registered trade name, and does not pretend to deceive his customers.

For imitating mahogany, cherry was formerly used almost entirely, but the diminished supply and the increased price of this wood have led manufacturers to seek a substitute which would woods that are most successfully imiturers to seek a substitute which would lend itself more readily to the stain than cherry, and, at the same time than cherry, and, at the same time, show the grain and hold the gloss. For show the grain and hold the gloss. For these reasons birch, especially curly birch, maple, beech, and gum are extensively used for all parts of furniture. Even in the better grades of mahogany furniture birch and maple stained to a mahogany finish are often used for posts and frames, while genuine mahogany, in the form of veneer, is used for panels, tops and rolls.

In making imitation quartered oak, almost any wood can be used, since in this case the original grain of the wood is first covered with a "filler" and then the quartering is printed on in dark this case the original grain of 'ke wood is first covered with a "filler" and then the quartering is printed on in dark ink by the impression of actual quartered oak rolls, or by a transfer from quartered oak prepared by special processes. Birch, maple, poplar and plain sawed oak are commonly used for this work. After the wood has been finished and polished, the imitation appears so real that only an expert can detect the difference.

Certain woods used in furniture construction are extremely expensive, owing to the difficulty of obtaining pieces with a good grain of sufficient size for working. Such, for instance, is Circassian wahfut. This, which comes from the Ural Mountains, is largely used in the form of veneers for chair backs, panels, and tops in bedroom suites, table tops, etc., the balance of the piece of furniture being composed either of American or black wahnut (natural finish) or of satin walnut, commonly known as red gum. The latter, while it does not often show the beautiful grain of the panel, is so near the color of plain Circassian walnut that only close scrutiny can detect the difference.

nastication, the first stage in the as-imilation of food. But the nature of the food taken determines to a large extent the condition of the molars. This idea is borne out by the fact that in Norway, where roast meats are the ex-ception, the condition of teeth is nearly always excellent.

"The Norwegians, above all things, understand the art of preparing fish. One of the most appetizing ways of eating this article of diet is as fishballs, for which the fish is boned and pounded and stewed after being rolled into balls. Meatballs are prepared the same way. When meat does appear it is usually under the guise of boiled mutton, and this dish is generally followed by prunes stewed in tapioca.

"The national Saturday dinner will not appeal very appetizingly to American minds, for it consists of raw pickled herring (pickled in brine), with raw onlons and boiled potatoes. The Norweglans claim for it that in this form none of the nutriment is lost. An imported dish, which bids fair also to become a national dinner, is a delicious Spanish dish, resembling 'olla padrida', which is made of faked ood, baked with slied potatoes, tomatoes and rich gravy.

"Supper is a hearty meal, taken about seven in the evening. Among the various dishes in customary use are meatballs, 'slid' salad (herring salad made of pickled herring, onion, sage and parsley, mine-

ery. But the chief items of domestic economy which appeal to the stranger are the great variety of dishes, the lengthy time devoted to the preparation of meals and the extreme care and cleanliness of the housewife, with whom nothing is ever too much trouble.

"One cannot but admire the sensible way in which the temperance question is dealt with, for Norway possesses non-alcoholic drinks which are not palatable merely, but delicious. The fruit syrups are things to be desired, and the imitations of intoxicants are really attractive. This is a common sense way of dealing tions of intoxicants are really attractive. This is a common sense way of dealing with intemperance. The 'alcoholfrik' liquid most frequently drank is known as 'vateroel,' and appears to be an unfermented malt beer, acrated without being objectionably gassy. It is sweet and nutritious, and otherwise much resembles good stout. It is said that the Norwegian who leaves his mother country has much difficulty in assimilating American foods that he actually pines for his native diet; but a month of Norwegian dietary to the average American induces in him a longing for something he can real him a longing for something he can really 'put his teeth into.'"

DOINGS AROUND THE CITY HALL

SMALLPOX PATIENTS RELEASED, AND ONLY ONE CASE NOW.

Dr. Roberts, the Medical Health Officer, to-day released James Patterson, the Cannon street grocer, who has been confined at the Isolation Hospital with mallpox. Patterson's sister, who is un-24% der quarantine at her brother's residence on Cannon street, was released on Saturday, and returned to Ancaster. There is only one smallpox case here There is only one smallpox case here now, that of Sylvia Boothman, a girl residing on East avenue. Dr. Roberts says she is making splendid progress towards recovery. He is having an inventory taken of the goods in Patterson's store. The open stuff, such as sugar, tea and so on, will be destroyed, but the doctor says the Board could see no reason for destroying sealed goods. The stock in the store was valued at over $500.

There will be a special meeting of the Fire and Water Committee this afternoon to open tenders for the electric pumps it is proposed to instal at the Beach pumping station. Seven firms have tendered. A number of these are United States concerns. Some of the members of the committee do not think they afe justified in sending any recommendation to the Council about the pumps until the people vote on the bylaw.

Annie Strongman, who owns the house at 80 Birge street, has written to City Clerk Kent complaining of the way the water pipes at that address are destroyed by electrolysis. The tenant destroyed by electrolysis. The tenant she says, is constantly complaining of flooding, and, although the city repairs the pipes every few months, it does no good. She urges the city to do something to compel the Cataract Power Company to remove the cause, and unless this is done threatens to hold the city liable for future damage. This is one of the places where the Toronto expert, who made a report, found the electrolysis to be very bad.

Principal Manning, of the Ryerson school, several days ago told the pupils attending there that any who desired to do so might contribute their pennies toward a fund to make Christmas pleasant for some of the city's poor. They contributed over $20, and this amount was handed over by Mr. Manning to Relief Officer McMenemy, who will see that several poor children are made happy as a result on Christmas day.
