

GONE TO HIS REST.

Death of the Rev. Dr. Fushon at the Age of Fifty-seven.

HIS LATE ENGLAND AND IN CANADA.

LONDON, April 14.

The Rev. Wm. M. Fushon died to-day at his residence in London, at the age of fifty-seven, which he had been suffering for a long time.

LONDON, April 19.

The remains of the late William Morley Fushon, Wesleyan minister, were interred to-day in the Lower Norwood cemetery, on the Surrey side of the Thames, with considerable ceremony.

The Lord Mayor's carriage followed in the procession, although it was not occupied by anyone. Two chaplains of the army, one of whom had officiated at the funeral, were present.

The procession was a most impressive one, and was followed by a large number of people, including many of the Wesleyan preachers in and about London, and a multitude of people belonging to the denomination, of which his late residence was the scene of conspicuous preaching.

The procession comprised seventeen mourning coaches, and the services both at the late residence of the deceased and at the grave were very impressive.

We are sure that the high intelligence, communicated by his late will, of the death of the late Mr. Fushon, will be familiar to us and the streets of Toronto, in religious assemblies, and at philanthropic gatherings.

Most of us remember the five years he passed in our midst, and moments of his biography, and his very voice, the indomitable power for work, and the eloquent speech of the first pastor of the Metropolitan church.

Amongst those especially of his own country, the sad intelligence of his death will be received with unfeigned regret. In McGill work stands a handsome monument to his work and power as a Christian minister.

He possessed a rare power of moving the masses by a fervent and a secret power of persuasion which had nothing of the purely sensational element about it. The speech came from the heart, and did not seem to be a mere recitation of words.

Dr. Fushon infused a higher and higher utility not only into the Methodist Church, but into the entire Christian community, with whom his essentially catholic spirit made him, from the first, a welcome guest.

The materials for his biography are somewhat meagre; he was born at Doncaster, in Yorkshire, in 1824. The father of WILLIAM MORLEY FUSHON was a Baptist minister, and a prominent Wesleyan preacher.

The young man was educated at his maternal uncle, Sir Isaac Morley. His early education was conducted at private seminaries, where he distinguished himself by singular aptitude for learning and by prodigious memory.

At the age of fifteen he was removed from school, notwithstanding the promise he had given of intellectual power, and placed in the office of his grandfather, a bookseller in London.

He subsequently removed to Sunderland. Fortune, however, was in his favour, for at the age of twenty he went to reside with his uncle, a clergyman in London.

Dr. Fushon had been a Wesleyan minister in the East, and his zeal fired the young clerk. He resolved to devote himself to the work of the ministry. It would appear that he was not without success, for he was appointed as a minister of the Wesleyan Church. His first charge was at Marn, in the county of Essex.

He was subsequently transferred to the Wesleyan Church at Baywater, in London, where it was desired to raise a new Wesleyan church. The scheme was carried out, and in 1861 he was transferred to Leighton. During this period Mr. Fushon continued to lecture at intervals, and it is stated that by the delivery of one of these lectures, he raised a sum of £100,000 for the Wesleyan cause.

He was subsequently transferred to the Wesleyan Church at English Watering places. The scheme was carried out, and in 1861 he was transferred to Leighton. During this period Mr. Fushon continued to lecture at intervals, and it is stated that by the delivery of one of these lectures, he raised a sum of £100,000 for the Wesleyan cause.
