Is No. 2 Fatal For Kings!

During the past fifty years Europe has been getting rid of her autocratic rulers at the average rate of one every seven years.

The death-knell of autocracy first sounded in September, 1870. When, after the Battle of Sedan, "Bonaparte the Little," Napoleon III., Emperor of France, capitulated to the German Emperor. Neither he nor William I. foresaw that the French Republic would be the result, and certainly no one then imagined that that Republic would fight another Battle of Sedan in 1918 and that a German Republic would be the result.

An Empress's Flight.

It was on September 2nd, 1870, that Napoleon III. gave up his sword to the first Emperor of Germany and was sent to the Castle of Wilhelmshöhe, near Cassel. Two days later the French Republic was proclaimed at the Hotel de Ville in Paris; the same day the Empress Eugenie fled to England with her son, the Prince Imperial. It was not until March of the following year that Napoleon was able to rejoin them, and he only survived his exile two years.

So France set the ball rolling, and though it was some time before another European nation carried on the game, Brazil and China helped to fill in the interval.

Dom Pedro Deposed.

The world was astonished on November 15th, 1889, to hear of a revolution in the Portuguese Empire of Brazil. Everybody thought that Dom Pedro II. was a model monarch. He did not go in for "pomp and vanity"; he devoted himself to the betterment of his country and its people.

But Benjamin Constant, a professor at the Military College, had been preaching socialism for eight or nine years and had created a big following, principally among the educated classes and the military. The upshot was a military conspiracy in 1889, the Emperor being replaced by a Republican Government on November 15th.

Next day Dom Pedro and his family were escorted on board a Government cruiser which took them to Lisbon, where the Empress died shortly afterwards—of a broken heart it was said. Her husband, like Napoleon III., lived only two years after his deposition.

Flight to Gibraltar.

Twenty-one years later, in 1910, the desire for self-government spread to Portugal, as might have been expected. On October 5th, 1910, a republic was proclaimed at Lisbon and young King Manoel II., together with his mother, escaped to Gibraltar and thence to England.

Unlike the Brazilian coup d'etat, which was bloodless, fierce fighting took place in the Portuguese capital for some days, while the actual revolution was preceded by the assassination of King Carlos and his eldest son—a terrible precursor of the storm then brewing.

A World Surprise.

Nothing in history, probably, took the world by surprise so much as when, on February 12th, 1912, it was flashed across the cables that a republic had been declared in China, the oldest of monarchies. The Imperial family of Manchu origin, dated from 1644, and was known as the "Great Pure Dynasty."

The last Emperor, Pu-yi, was born on February 11th, 1906, and was the tenth of the line, succeeding his uncle, Kuang-Hsu, on November 14th, 1908.

Thick and Fast.

With the coming of the Great War, crowns fell thick and fast. Czar Nicholas II. was forced to abdicate on March 15th, 1917; Wilhelm II. slipped furtively into Holland and from his "fox's earth" at Amerongen sent his abdication on November 9th last; while Karl of Austria, accompanied by his wife, fled from Vienna three days later and sought safety as a private citizen at Eckartsau.

In passing it is interesting to note the apparent fatality about the second of a name—Dom Pedro II., Manoel II., Nicholas II., Wilhelm II.—Tit Bits.

A Plucky Old Man.

Ebenezer Ramsey, 82 years old, killed three bears near his home in Long Valley, on the line between El Dorado and Placer Counties, Cal., a few days ago but escaped possible death from one of them by the interference of his dog. Ramsey's dog treed a large bear and her two cubs, and Ramsey, with an ancient single shot rifle, went to investigate. Seeing the bears, he shot all three, but the mother bear was not killed and on falling to the ground she took after Ramsey before he could re-load his rifle. His dog, however, pounced upon the infuriated animal and kept it busy until Ramsey secured an ax with which he killed the brute. He says it was the most exciting hunt he ever had.

Strange Coincidence.

It comes naturally to the Mickey twins of Junction City Kan., to do things in pairs, but their latest feat has their friends guessing. The two young men, De Witt and Walte, are sons of Mrs. Eva Mickey of the above city. They went through school and college together and at the beginning of the war joined the army at the same time. Both were commissioned Lieutenants, and word was received to-day that each had been advanced to the grade of captain. The appointments came simultaneously and the incident is all the more remarkable because they are widely separated and in different branches of the service. Capt. De Witt Mickey is with the heavy artillery in France and Capt. Walte Mickey is assigned to duty at the War Department, Washington.
