ZANGWILL, THE HUMORIST

I. Zangwill, playwright and wit—happy and unusual combination—is here again, this time in connection with the staging of his new play, "The Children of the Ghetto," says the New York Telegram. When Mr. Zangwill was here before he was occupied with reforming our artistic outlook through the medium of readings and lectures. Now while he is rather modest about it and loath to do greatly into detail, he is occupied with the larger mission of correcting our artistic impression of the Hebrew.

"The Hebrew," as he puts it, in the bored way of the artist, who is called upon to explain what he is trying to do, "has never been put upon the stage. Because he is so easy to caricature, he has never been presented in any other form. His religious feeling, for example, and many other of his qualities, have never been truly presented. There are so many little niceties of custom, feeling, manner, dress, even, that the most intelligent stage manager might miss, that I have thought it worth while to make this trip to see that these things are done right. As soon as the play is properly staged I shall return to England."

No unambitious project, this artistic rehabilitation of a race, yet it has the virtue of being one that should prove popular on Broadway.

Drifting into the matter of detail, Mr. Zangwill was adverse to touching on his aims more definitely. "The play must speak for itself," he said. "I do not know what else can be said about it, while it is still an unformed thing, except that it is to be first presented in Washington on Sept. 18, and will likely remain there a week, though," he added rather whimsically, "it's more difficult to say when these things end than when they begin."

The play in question is Mr. Zangwill's first important work, though he hastened to add, after the confession, "That is not my fault. I have been trying for years to get the managers to take something important."

Dave Warfield, too, it seems, has only himself to blame for not being associated with this present production. "I think he is a great artist," the playwright said, "and I would have liked to have had him take a part, but it seems it could not be. But then, I've done my part. I can't help it if Mr. Warfield prefers burlesque to the drama," the author added, with that whimsical air he so much affects.

As will be seen, Mr. Zangwill is something of a humorist in addition to his other qualities. All that his coming play promises only those who have been at the pains to read his novel can know.

—Port Elgin Times: Word has just come to hand of the death of Mr. Wm. Muir, son of 2, Saugeen, which occurred at London on Monday, Aug. 28. The news was not unexpected, as Mr. Muir's health had been falling rapidly for some time. Thus another of the pioneers is gone. Few men in this district were better known than the deceased. He was one of Saugeen's most successful farmers, and the fact that he was several times elected to the township council testified to the high esteem in which he was held. He was a kind father and a good neighbor. We do not know of a home where more hospitality was shown. The universal respect in which he and his family are held was shown by the large concourse of friends and relatives who gathered at the funeral, which took place on Wednesday afternoon to Port Elgin cemetery.

ABOUT HOSPITAL MANAGEMENT

Consulting Physicians Ask the Trust to Make a Radical Change.

The Care of Patients To Be Entirely in the Hands of a Board of Medical Men.

A radical change in the management of the new City Hospital is proposed. Suggestions along this line from the consulting physicians are to be considered at a meeting of the Hospital Trust this afternoon. It is argued that the superintendent should be relieved of all medical work, or that a bursar or some other salaried official be engaged. The consulting physicians regard the first alternative as the best and suggest therefore that a medical board be organized. This board is to have no power or authority outside of the care of the patients, and the general superintendent to be vested with complete control. The proposed medical staff would consist of six consulting physicians and surgeons and twelve experienced assistants. No salaries are to be paid the patients, and only experienced physicians shall serve on the board. It is thought that the proposed change in the management will tend to make the patients more popular with the physicians in the city and with the public generally.

THE ANIMALS DIDN'T TALK

But They Did About Everything Else —Norris Bros. Show a Big Success.

The big tent of the Norris Bros. trained animal show was crowded yesterday afternoon and evening. The majority of the spectators in the afternoon were children, and the little folks simply shrieked with delight throughout the performance.

The Norris Bros. show is one of the most effective, instructive and entertaining ever seen in London. The point to which this wonderful collection of ponies and dogs has been trained is almost incredible. The almost human intelligence evinced by some of the animals is astounding. But what above all else contributes to the enjoyment of the spectators is the evident pleasure and pride with which the stock, hand, some ponies, the aristocratic, well-groomed dogs, and the mischievous, insolent monkeys enter into the fun of the thing.

Most of the ladies present raved over the beauty of the ponies, while the children went wild with delight at everything. There were ponies who could go through a military drill, ponies who could wait, a mathematical pony who could do all the boys' arithmetical arithmetic. Clown dogs, dogs that could turn somersaults, walk on their hind legs, walk on their front legs, spar with boxing gloves, in fact, do pretty nearly everything they were told to do—were so plentiful, that before the show was over it seemed quite the natural order of things. The police patrol and the fire brigade features are won't with capital effect. The zebra and the elephant lend a circus flavor to a show that is otherwise quite unique.

FAGGED OUT—None but those who have become fagged out know what a fagged out is. Fagged out is a word which has taken hold of the sufferers. They feel as though there was nothing to live for. There, however, is a cure—one box of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do wonders in restoring health and strength. Mandrake and Dandelion are two of the articles entering into the composition of Parmelee's Pills.

Appearances Deceive.—Mrs. Gobbs: "I think it very strange that your friend Dobbs never married." Mr. Gobbs: "Oh, you don't know Dobbs. He isn't half such a fool as he looks." —New York Weekly.

WAS LOOKING FOR A FIGHT

Witnesses Say Gowanlock Was in a Quarrelsome Mood.

And Tried to Pick a Quarrel With Harding—Five Witnesses Heard.

Testimony All Tended to Show That Harding Was Provoked.

Inquest Not Yet Concluded—Three More Witnesses Will Be Heard Tonight.

The Gowanlock inquest was resumed last night at the police station at 7:30. Coroner Dr. Piper was anxious to conclude the inquest last night, but after four hours had been spent in hearing evidence, three witnesses were still to be heard, and an adjournment was made to tonight at 8 o'clock. Last night's evidence was, on the whole, rather favorable to Harding, who is charged with killing Gowanlock. The evidence tended to show that Gowanlock was in a quarrelsome mood, and seemed bent on fixing a quarrel on the defendant, Harding.

AN IMPORTANT WITNESS.

William Dyer, a horse trainer, living at 52 Palace street, who is also under arrest, saw Gowanlock on Monday night at the O'Neill house yard. The first thing he saw was a quantity of water thrown at the deceased by some of the girls employed at the hotel. Gowanlock, when passing a horse that Mr. Blue was cleaning, made a kick at it. A little later a second shower of water was thrown at Gowanlock by the girls. He (Dyer), Harding, Mr. McInnes and a couple of others who composed a group, laughed heartily, and Gowanlock came towards Harding, muttering something which witness could not hear. Gowanlock then put his open hands up at Harding, and a scuffle ensued, but no blows were struck as far as he could see.

Mr. Magee—Did you expect trouble? Witness—Yes, sir, I did, as Gowanlock looked as if he was going to fight, and I knew Harding would defend himself if necessary.

Mr. Magee—How were they separated? Witness—By Mr. Beach, who asked Harding to go and sit down and behave himself. Harding complied immediately.

Mr. Magee—Did Harding seem very angry? Witness—No, sir, he seemed very cool.

The only words witness heard Harding use to the deceased were to the effect that he would put him in the water trough. After the scuffle, Gowanlock went into the house, and on coming out walked over toward Harding again. Witness could not say as to what started the row, but saw the men come together.

Mr. Magee—Who started the fight? Witness—I could not say.

Mr. Magee—Did you see Harding strike Gowanlock? Witness—Yes, sir; he struck him either two or three times.

Mr. Magee—What happened then? Witness—Gowanlock fell forward to the ground.

Witness thought that when Gowanlock put up his hands, he was going to either strike or attack Harding with his hands.

Mr. Magee—Did Gowanlock say anything after he came out of the hotel?

ROBERT M. BURNS, 180 Dundas Street.

Harding said to Gowanlock, "Well, you have come to lick me."

To Mr. Love, witness said that Gowanlock was the aggressor in the first place. Witness did not think that Harding wanted to fight, but thought that Gowanlock was looking for trouble.

Mr. Love—Mr. Harding says that Gowanlock struck him on the jaw. Did you see this blow?

To a juror, witness said that Gowanlock was not struck after he fell.

A STRANGER.

Wm. Collins, proprietor of the O'Neill House, was not present when Gowanlock was struck. He was at his supper, when some loud talking in the yard attracted his attention. He went out to find Gowanlock lying on the ground with a man standing over him. He did not know the man, and asked his name, but the stranger refused to give it. He (Collins) asked what was the trouble, and the man gave him no satisfaction. On asking a second time he was told that it was none of his business. Witness told the man that he would make it his business, and the stranger then left, and said no more. He (Collins) thought that Gowanlock was stunned, and with the aid of Blue and another man, carried the body into the stable. After the doctor had pronounced life extinct, he went and informed the police.

Mr. Magee—Was Gowanlock in the habit of going around without a coat?

Witness—Yes, sir, I did. Cross-examined, witness said that it looked to him as if the man who was leaning over Gowanlock was turning him over. At first sight he thought he was kicking him, but could not say as to what he really was doing.

GOWANLOCK THE AGGRESSOR.

Richard Jones, of 142 Bathurst street, called at the O'Neill House on Monday night. He saw Gowanlock come out of house, and heard him muttering to himself and swear at Harding. The two men came together and he stepped between them, and afterwards took them out on to the street. He saw Gowanlock push Harding with his hands, and then saw Harding hit at Gowanlock, but could not say where the blow landed. He stepped in and grabbed Harding and started off with him, when he turned and saw Gowanlock fall to the ground. Witness was positive that Gowanlock called Harding a foul name. He (Jones) thought that Gowanlock would be too much for Harding.

"I CAN LICK YOU."

Robert Way, a blacksmith, was at the O'Neill house on Monday night. He first saw Gowanlock about 7 o'clock at the rear of the hotel, fooling with the girls employed at the house. Later when Gowanlock was passing a horse led by Blue, he made a kick at it. Witness heard a voice say, "Don't kick that horse, or you will get a punch in the face." It was not Harding who made the remark. Gowanlock said to Harding, "I hear you are a good man, but I can lick you," and muttered some other words. Harding just told him to go away and mind his own business. Gowanlock then pushed Harding, and the two men clinched, when they were separated by the hostler. Harding went and sat down, and Gowanlock went into the hotel and came out with his coat off.

Witness then went away and did not hear of the fatality until 10 o'clock at night.

To Mr. Love, witness said that Gowanlock had earlier in the evening threatened to lick him. Henry O'Neill, the young son of Dr. O'Neill, was present when Gowanlock was struck. Harding suddenly jumped up apparently at something done by Gowanlock, and said, "I'll go half-way." Gowanlock replied, "I'll go the other half," and asked Harding to come into the stable with him. Gowanlock then walked into the stable and Harding followed. The men came together and were separated before blows had been exchanged.

Gowanlock, after going into the hotel and coming out again, went toward Harding and when near him raised his hands as if for a fight, and pushed Harding backwards. Harding then struck Gowanlock twice on the right side of the chest with his left hand, and the latter fell and struck on his left side. A third blow aimed at Gowanlock fell short owing to Jones pulling Harding away. O'Neill thought both men under the influence of liquor. Adjourned at 11:45 p.m.

MONCTON, N. B.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills
Cure Mrs. P. D. Bourque of Nervousness and Fluttering of the Heart.

Mrs. P. D. Bourque, of Moncton, N. B., is one of those who never fail to sound the praises of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Some time ago she was troubled with a pain in her left side and fluttering of the heart. Her nerves were unstrung and she was easily excited and upset.

"I noticed Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills recommended for such troubles," she said, "and decided to try them. I therefore got a box and began taking them, and they have done me a great deal of good."

"Before taking these pills my appetite was poor and I was very much run down in health, but since their use I have gained in strength every day. They restored my heart to natural action, removed the pain from my side, and gave new health and vigor to every organ of my body."

Not only do Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cure such complaints as those that afflicted Mrs. Bourque, but they are the only effectual remedy known for palpitation, skip beats, smothering and sinking sensation, nervousness, sleeplessness, anaemia, St. Vitus' dance, weakness, female troubles and general debility.

Price 50 cents a box or three for $1.25, at all druggists. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, Ont.
