Stock Company.

The Mitchell Stock Company died very suddenly of natural causes at Bennett's Vaudeville Theater on Saturday night. As soon as the performance, "The British Grenadiers," had been concluded, Mr. Bennett, the proprietor of the house, canceled the company's lease, which was to have run two months.

Some weeks ago Mr. Mitchell leased the house from Mr. Bennett. He claimed his company was far ahead of the average popular-priced aggregations to which London had been accustomed, and he felt that he would be sure to build up a summer theatrical business here. If at all successful this season, he would return for the sum-But Mr. Bennett was wary. He has been a long time building up a reputation for his theater among Londoners, and he is very jealous of it. Consequently he had a clause inserted to the effect that if the productions were not in every way satisfactory to him he could cancel the lease at any time. "The British Grenadiers" was put on It made Mr. Bennett's hair stand on Some of the cast did not know their lines, and others who did know them didn't know what to do with them. In ten minutes Mr. Bennett saw that the company would do his house incalculable injury if allowed to run two months.
