A LIFE'S DEVOTION

BY FRANK H. SHAW.
"Author of 'A Daughter of the Storm,' 'First at the Pole,' etc. (Copyright in U. S. America. All Rights Reserved.)"

"Marrying?" she said, suddenly. "But—why should we marry? Aren't we well enough off as we are?"

"Not quite. I'll never believe I've won you, sweetest woman on earth, until I've got you safe under my own roof."

"My father," she began hastily, "I shall not allow you to come further," she said. "I want to be alone for a little while, to think over this wonderful thing. And he was perforce compelled to take her at her word. But he watched her out of sight."

CHAPTER XII.
Lord Greatheart's Answer.

Scroggs was aware of a strange weakness at the knees as he walked down the drive at Merrythought Hall the following morning, and more than once he felt a strange disposition to turn back and leave his avowed mission unfulfilled. It was a daring thing, he contemplated, this storming of a feudal stronghold, with an intention of taking from it its richest treasure. He pictured to himself the wrath and indignation of Lord Greatheart, the incredulity of his contemptuous stare, and he flushed and bit his lip, for no man likes to be treated with contempt, no matter what his station may be. And as he passed through the gates he saw himself as others would see him: as an adventurer, seeking for place and position, hoping that his wealth might buy him social standing in a county that so far had abhorred him. He was swiftly revising his standards. In his own world brain and business acumen had been the hall-mark of position, and he had stood high. His worshipping mother had praised him aloud and to his face, knowing that he could carry the corn of his commendation; and though he had treated her auditions with good-natured tolerance, some of them had found a resting-place in his mind, for no man can be fed on adoring compliments and remain unaware forever of his own merits.

Now, however, he understood that all this was changed. He was about to stand before a tribunal that was as much biased against him as his previous tribunals had been biased in his favor. His antecedents would be inquired into closely, and his new position would be forgotten. He would be the man of business standing before the peer, and he would be thought of as a boy, as a boy, he turned into the high road, he wished that he had ordered his car, so that the initial plunge might be taken remembered that the once, as a boy, he had visited the dentist's, and the thought of the agonized waiting on the doorstep between the ringing of the lodge gates, and the curious simper—then—as if wild horses could not drag him a step further. Then he remembered that, once he had seated himself in the operating chair, a stony carelessness had held him, and he would have taken heart of grace. After all, was only the initial plunge that counted. Presently the whole thing would be over and done with, and he would be the accepted lover of the woman of his choice.

It had not occurred to him that he might be turned away with contempt, and scorn from the door. He knew that his love lifted him up above himself, and that love keyed his thoughts so high that the startling difference between his position and that of Marion Seymour was hardly apparent. He loved her—she loved him. Those two facts were enough for Ebenezer Scroggs. Whether they would be enough for Lord Greatheart he did not stop to contemplate.

"I don't just know how to begin the business," he ruminated, striding on freely. "It will be a bit of a plunge." His pace slackened considerably. "Her father will be difficult to tackle, there's no earthly doubt of that, but I've tackled problems before, and I shall have to tackle problems when the memory of today has faded clean away. How shall I begin it? Lord Greatheart, I have the honor to inform you that I love your daughter, and that without her life will be blank? No, that savours too much of a novel. Lord Greatheart, may I have your permission to pay my addresses to your daughter, whom I love with all the heart that is in me? Not much better. I wonder how men do begin these things? I suppose there are some fellows who would not hesitate to state the commencement to a proposal that they would over-charge a five-pound note. They're the lucky ones." He took out his handkerchief and wiped away a light sweat that had gathered on his forehead.

"This won't do," he said in desperation. "I believe I'm in a white funk. Put your heart into it, Scroggs. After all, his lordship can't eat you without any aid, though he'd like to. I wonder if I've been too hasty? I wonder if I ought to put it off for a while, until the sting of this defeat has ceased to rankle. Perhaps I was a fool to election. Perhaps I should have retired with an easy grace, and I should have cleared a way. Common gratitude might then have impelled him to overlook my many demerits. But no. I give him the election to try to do the people good, and I'd have been several different sorts of a cad if I'd played a double game. I meant to win, and I did win—by one vote."

He laughed a little, but it was a weakly laugh.

"I'm taking the only honorable course," went on his thoughts. "It's what she'd have me do, God bless her!"

She's the very soul of honor, and if I'd taken the easier way, if I'd put on and put off, and if I'd abated one jot of my enthusiasm over this election, she'd have hated me once the first glamor was past. No; there's no drawing back now. No matter what the issue, I must play the straight game, and trust to my love and hers to bring me through."

He began to remember her words of the evening past, and dwelt with loving appreciation on her notions of honor. "That's where she's so different from the rest," he said. "I believe it's all true what she said. I believe that dishonor of any kind would break her heart. She's noble and brave and good, and altogether wonderful; but she'd fade away like a broken lily if a stain of dishonor touched the hem of her garment. And now's a good time to take an oath, Ebenezer. It's a hideous name, but she likes it—get back to the point, you fool!"

"Never shall any evil touch her life, if I can help it. I swear it solemnly here. What I can do to shield her from any stain shall be done all gladly. No matter what sacrifice it entails, she shall preserve her ideals untarnished. Let it cost me my fortune, let it cost me my life's work, no matter the cost, her happiness must be all in all to me; and if that happiness is bound up in honor, then dishonor must have no place in her life. I swear it most solemnly, oh, my God! he looked up into the wintry sky, and his words were very earnest. He had taken his vow; and this man, plain and simple, in many ways, would keep it to the full, even though his keeping cost him more than life itself. He was not a man of that oath at no very distant date; he was to bring his teeth in bitter torn to his taking; but unwaveringly, he was to hold it, though the fabric of his existence should be shattered about him, and a cloud that was darker than death itself enveloped his life.

SUES TENNIE CLAFLIN

$30,000 Is Silver's Bill—Says She Hired Him to Write Her Biography.
New York, April 6.—Supreme Court Justice Blanchard directed yesterday that testimony be taken in London in a suit brought against Lady Cook (Tennessee) by Harry C. Silver to recover $30,000 damages, on the ground that she hired him to write her biography in 1907, and agreed to buy at least 20,000 copies at $1.50 a volume. The witnesses to be examined are Sir Frederick Cook, of the Oakley, Mrs. Holford Chapman, of Charles Welles and Mrs. Ella Welles, and Mrs. John Biddulph Martin (Victoria Woodhull).

Silver says that Mr. Drayton, a London lawyer, can tell how Lady Cook visited his office with Silver and discussed the means of getting money from Sir Frederick Cook and the Bank of England to finance the biography.

ROCKEFELLER PLAN BAD

Dr. Gladden Says Scheme "Savors Too Much of Conscience Salving."
Columbus, Ohio, April 6.—"More harm than good will be done through the carrying out of John D. Rockefeller's proposed plan of giving away his fortune," is the opinion expressed by Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, theologian of world-wide reputation and long the pastor of the First Congregational Church of this city. In discussing the matter of this eminent divine declared that the distribution of beneficence in the Rockefeller way has a tendency to destroy the self-reliance and self-maintenance of those whom it supports, and that it is not a true beneficence, but a "saviors too much of conscience-salving to be morally uplifting."

Colds Affect the Kidneys

MOST PAINFUL AILMENTS FOLLOW—THEIR HEALTH AND ACTIVITY RESTORED BY

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

When you catch cold there is nothing better to do than to take a dose of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills at bedtime.

Colds often settle on the kidneys and are followed by the most painful and fatal results. By quickening the action of the kidneys, the time you enable them to carry off the lurking poisons and prevent serious disease.

Keep the back warm, avoid sitting with the back in a draft, and regulate the kidneys by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. These rules are worth following, particularly at this season of the year.

Mr. W. Ferguson, blacksmith, Trenton, Ont., states: "In my work, bending over a great deal, and this, together with the constant strain on all parts of the body, and the sudden change of temperature when going to and from the forge, has caused kidney disease and backache. At times I would suffer so that I would have to quit work to ease my back, and felt so miserable most of the time I did not enjoy life very much."

"At last I decided that I would have to get relief in some way, and having heard of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a successful cure for backache and kidney disease, I began using them. To my surprise and pleasure they helped me at once, and a few boxes entirely removed my troubles."

CHATHAM INCENDIARY GETS FOUR YEARS

Laforest Sent to Kingston for Committing Crime of Arson.

Chatham, April 6.—Edward Laforest, farm laborer at Mitchell's Bay, and whose criminal record is familiar to police of many large American cities, was this morning sentenced to four years in Kingston Penitentiary on the charges of arson and burglary by Magistrate Houston in county police court.

Laforest, at the hearing on Thursday last, confessed to the burning of the Joy Club at Mitchell's Bay two years ago and theft of two double-barrelled guns from the burning building. He informed the court that he and another man named Cedar, who was caught and sentenced over a year ago, had visited the place and poured kerosene all over the interior. Then each had touched a match.

Cedar was caught and sentenced to one year in the Central Prison, but Laforest escaped to the States, and has since served short terms in Montana, Utah and Michigan prisons.

Prisoner is about 35 years old, and appears to be fairly well educated. His home is in Detroit.

Magistrate Houston—Have you any letters of recommendation to show, or any person here to say a word in your behalf?

The prisoner was forced to answer in the negative.

"I move sentence of court," stated Crown Attorney Smith.

The magistrate explained to Laforest just how serious the charges were. "You are liable to life imprisonment on a charge of arson, and fourteen years in the penitentiary for the other. Arson is considered next to murder in this country."

Laforest stood erect all the time, and never batted an eye. His hands hung to his side, and in his right hand he clutched a soft cloth.

"In the case of arson," continued the magistrate, "you destroy something that does no good to yourself at all. I presume that is one of the reasons the penalty is so heavy."

"The sentence of the court on you is," solemnly voiced Magistrate Houston, "four years in Kingston Penitentiary on each charge, but they are to run concurrently."

Laforest's head sank to his breast. Taking his seat, he riveted his eyes on the floor, and never moved them until taken to the jail to await transportation to Kingston.

DIVORCE SURPRISES HER

Kate Claxton Will Have Lawyers Investigate It.
New York, April 6.—Kate Claxton, the actress, who went to Jersey City Monday to look up the records of her husband, Charles A. Stevenson, said today she never was served with any divorce papers by Stevenson, and did not know until lately that he had obtained a divorce. She was married again. In private life Mrs. Claxton retains the name of Mrs. Stevenson. She said that she saw her husband before his departure for the west last November.

"In none of our interviews did he mention the subject of having obtained a divorce from me or deciding such, and the first intimation I had of divorce was when I went to Jersey City yesterday and learned the facts from the records. I shall have my lawyers investigate this matter and take such steps as may be necessary to protect my rights."

WINNIPEG JOKERS.

Winnipeg, April 6.—August Brandt, at one time a prosperous business man, stood in the dock today, the victim of a practical joke. He was

RADIANT HAIR

While much attention is given to choicest gowns by New York society women, the turbulent fad just now is the care of the hair.

For many years the clever women of Paris have been famed for the magnificent beauty of their hair.

"Glorious hair," a Virginian calls it, "so radiant and luxuriant that it not only attracts but attracts and compels unstinted admiration."

But now that the elite of New York, ever anxious to improve their beauty, have learned that Parisian hair is a remarkable and almost marvelous, hair nourisher and beautifier, is almost entirely responsible for the charming hair of the ladies of France, the demand for it has become enormous.

Parisian hair is now sold all over Canada, and in London by W. T. Strong, who is glad to guarantee it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itchy scalp in two weeks of money back. Large bottles 50 cents.

charged with threatening to kill court officials. This grim climax followed a plot of George Mohr, a merchant, to make Brandes believe a pretty widow wanted to marry him. When Brandes discovered the joke, he sued Mohr for $200 damages for loss of time. He lost his suit, and brooded over it until he concluded the court officials were leagued against him. He rushed into the clerk's office yesterday, grabbed the papers in the case, and escaped. He was arrested on a warrant charging threats. He was ordered held for examination into his sanity.

BETTER THAN TEXAS IS SASKATCHEWAN

And in Twenty Years Will Produce More Grain Than United States.

New York, April 6.—William Whyte, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is at the Waldorf-Astoria, made a prediction today that within a very short time the Province of Saskatchewan will produce more wheat than Texas. "And in 15 or 20 years," Mr. Whyte added, "it will be producing more wheat than the whole United States. We had fine crops last year in the three prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, wheat, oats, barley and hay, all being excellent."

"They fetched good prices, and that put the farmers in the position of being able to purchase more goods and to travel. Consequently the effect upon immigration this year is bound to be enormous."

"Last year we had the largest immigration Western Canada ever had. We are getting a great many English, Scotch and Irish—not city-bred, but the better classes from the country. Last year we got 90,000 Americans, and they are the best settlers we can get. They come with their stock and their implements and their cash, and above all, with their experience in prairie farming. So they strike work at once. They are settling chiefly in Southern Alberta."

SAYS "RED WAVE" IS SIGNIFICANT

Professor Rein Believes the Masses Are More Intelligent Than in Past.

Berlin, April 6.—Prof. Rein, of Jena University, contributes to the Tag an article explaining the significance of "The Red Wave" in Germany. That the wave is increasing in size and, undoubtedly shown by elections in the empire and the elections for the diets of the separate states, and he attributes his advance to the improvement in the education provided by the schools and the army.

What are described as "the masses," he contends, are, as they become more intelligent, acquiring a desire to take a position in public life, and the movement has been furthered by the financial reform recently adopted.

The people, he says, believe that an unfair proportion of the new taxes has been imposed on them, and that the possessing classes refuse to bear their due share of the burdens. The outcome of the movement will, in his opinion, depend on the manner in which the governing classes defend their position.

The advancing masses, he declares, have no wish to wage in blood. What they want is justice, understanding for the intellectual and economic needs of the people, consideration for the weak and participation in public life of the economically strong.

It would be a fatal mistake, he asserts, to attempt to repulse the "red wave" by the employment of force, and, if serious consequences ensue, the blame will attach to the statesmen and politicians who fail to understand the spirit of the times. He prophesies that the next election will prove the strength of the increased strength of the Socialist party, what a mistake has been made in regard to financial reform.

Two Mills Using Same Quality of Wheat May Not Produce Same Quality of Flour

The quality of flour largely depends on the milling. Two mills might grind wheat of the same quality and the product of one far outclass the other. It is not only the high quality of the hard wheat used, but also the superior milling facilities, that places "PURITY" flour so far above all others. Our milling plant at St. Boniface, Manitoba, cost nearly $1,000,000, and is one of the most perfectly equipped mills in the world. The wheat itself is subjected to the most wonderful system of cleaning and scouring, passing through twenty distinct machines. Fifty-five steel rollers, the largest in Canada, reduce the wheat into flour. Then it is purified and dressed by "bolting" it through silk sifters of fine mesh. Not a "branny" particle or speck of dust is ever found in "Purity" Flour.

You may have to pay a little more for Purity, but baking results, quality and quantity, prove it is worth far more than the slight difference.

We have two other modernly equipped mills at Brandon, Man., and Goderich, Ont.
