Music and Drama

No Excuses for "Excuse Me."

If cheerfulness be the sunshine of the mind, Rupert Hughes may be called the man who tapped an artesian depth, from which flow laughter, sniggers, titters, chuckles, giggles, guffaws, etc. Putting over an illusion like Excuse Me," when women are takng chloroform for their uncontrollable risibilities, is dangerous for the peace of mind of those sad sisters who are put on earth to sigh. One may wear the deep mourning of resignation to the sorrows of life, only to be uncloaked of the languishing mood in a twinkle, should he get aboard the Overland Limited for a carnival of pranks in a couple of Pullmans, with a lot of foolish folks aboard. Of course, some are "pleased with a feather, tickled with a straw," and must belong among those to whom a foolish farce is madness. But none of those 1,800 odd passengers will surely advance the claim that for such an uproarious journey of two thousand miles they were overnarged. Of course, they only saw the elegraph poles flash by, but the scenery would have been monotonous after a few miles, anyway, and think of the fun they had inside! Those two cars carried an overflowing load of wit and cleverness, and whim and drollery-and human nature. Yes. constructive human nature, perhapsthe kind that seems to lack performance, but has possibility. Of course. no carload of persons would do the perfectly absurd (flossy talk) things that were done, but they might have been done, mightn't they? And who knows but what Mr. Conductor or Mr. Porter might not (being sufficiently endowed with this literary gift), have been able to sort out the experiences of two or three or ten years, and paste them together? Any one of the incidents might have occurred by itself. hat all of them might have occurred

Rupert Hughes pasted a thousand-odd Pullman car inci-dents on a thousand miles miles or so, and ran them through with a human phonograph attachment. Perhaps there was a mechanical effect to it all, but the reader must remember this was a railroad There was a bunch of stage business that would baffle any adjective, save Irish stew (used in its adjectival sense). The bellcord and the curtains and the cushions and the porter's ladder and the chandeliers all joined their nimble wits with those of the actors, and after the grave faces began to light up there were enchantment and dash to the performance, that carried the audience off its feetespecially at the moment when Kathleen pulled the bellcord.

The farce had a Gatling gun attachment necessary to the projection of larks and sprees and quips over the footlights. There was an endless fire of banter, there were touches of even the dramatic, there was a demand that playgoers as well as players be quickwitted. Enough comedy was flashed away on the side to make several ordinary farces. There was a well-regulated background of buffoonery, but the stage business was managed perfeetly. Anyone who didn't enjoy himsay the least, indifferent to the rekindling influences of comic stimula-

The farce was acted by a thoroughly capable company of Pullman habitues. May they travel as merrily on the real rails!

Stahl in her latest success, "Maggie epper," at the Grand on Thursday night, he supporting company will be the same which appeared during the engagement of six months at the Harris Theatre, New York, and for four months at the Illinois Theatre in Chicago. Besides Miss Stahl. the cast will include Frederick Truesdale, Herbert Ayling, Mary Hampton, Eleanor Lawson, Walter Craven, Agnes Marc, Gretchen Lang, Lee Kohlmar, Natalie Jerome, William J. Kline, Percival T. Moore, Marie Hudson, Albert Goldberg and Franklyn Roberts. "Maggie Pepper" was written by Charles Klein especially for Miss Stahl. It tells graphically and with ample use of modern slang, the progress of the girl in her fight for position in a big department store. The play reveals the politics of that kind of a life, and, being unusual, is thereby the more interesting. Seats selling.

TERRIBLE CHARGES AGAINST FARMER

It Is Alleged That His Criminal Neglect Caused His Wife's Death.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Sandwich, Feb. 5 .- George Knight, of Gosfield South, appeared before Judge friends recently. McHugh today charged with criminal neglect, which, it is alleged, resulted n the death of his wife. The judge will give his decision on Wednesday next, and Knight was released on $3, The evidence of Lucy Knight, 15-year-old daughter of the accused, was very damaging to the defence, and when the witness left the stand she was almost in a state of collapse. She told the court it was she who first called Dr. Jenner, of Kingsville, to attend her mother. "I went to a neighbor's telephone, while father was away from home," said the girl. "The doctor came and when my father was told of it, he got mad at me, and said I had no right to call a doctor without The process of living is something asking him." She also told of her father selling thirteen ducks which she had raised and cared for, and his keeping the money. "What did you intend to do with the money?" asked Mr. Rodd. "I was going to get some clothes," she answered. The father later kept a postoffice order for $2, which Mrs. Knight had sent to her by mail, the girl said. Dr. Jenner repeated the evidence he gave at a preliminary hearing in Windsor, short time ago. He told of the insanitary condition of the home and the patient. He said lack of proper care and nourishment had a great deal to do with the woman contracting pneumonia and hastening her
