MISERY IN WEST IRELAND.

What a Visitor Saw at Carraroe-Wretched Abode of the Inhabitants.

From the Catholic Times.
I reached Carraroe on Saturday evening, and on the next day I happened to meet Rev. Walter Conway, who was on his way to attend some religious service at the island which makes up his struggling and extensive parish. Being anxious to see as much of the condition of the people as possible, I gladly accepted his invitation to accompany him.

I was by no means prepared for the scenes I witnessed that Sunday afternoon. Such poverty-stricken people, such wretched hovels, such misery, and patient suffering I never saw before, and I hope I shall never see again. There was scarcely a home but had some famished lying down with fever, brought on, I was assured by the local doctor, by hunger or the want of sufficient food. It was pitiable in the extreme to see the emaciated features of most of them, and the looks of famished despair on their countenances as they lay huddled together on the bare earthen floor or staggered about the house like drunken people from sheer exhaustion.

While the good priest was administering the last sacraments to a few of the worst cases, I inspected several of the houses proceeded me by several yards. On his pushing the door of this house open I observed him reel backward and look as if he were going to faint. The fever-stricken man who lay on the floor was so emaciated that he was scarcely more than a skeleton, and it seemed as if he were about to die.

I had some difficulty in realizing the fearful scene before me. On one side of the hearth lay two young boys in a state of unconsciousness, and almost side by side with them lay two sisters in the same pitiable condition. Following the direction indicated by the priest, I observed the mother of these four children, a few feet off, with a few scanty rags that only covered her with the light, and what my feelings were can be better imagined than described.

The priest remained a considerable time in the cabin, I returned to find him engaged in cutting off the girl's hair with an old rusty scissors which he discovered after a close search. The next day the priest visited the stricken family again, and carried him- self to avoid publicity—two of his own black-and-white with which the poor girls and their brothers.

Why will you allow a cough to become a throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave when, by the timely use of Bickel's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the pain can be allayed and the danger avoided. This Syrup is pleasant to the taste, and a most powerful for relieving, healing and curing all affections of the throat and lungs, coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc., etc.

The Coal Fields of New South Wales are of enormous extent. The mineral has been traced for hundreds of miles along the coast, and has been worked at various levels from 450 feet below to 1,500 feet above the sea. The lower beds are geographically older than any that have been yet worked in England, and the quality of the coal which is taken from these inferior strata is therefore unsurpassed. Not only so, but in certain districts immense seams of this mineral are found in immediate juxtaposition with an abundance of iron ores, limestone and fire clay. Hence nature seems to have indicated New South Wales as the great manufacturing colony of the Australian group. Up to the present time, coal has been ascertained to exist over an area of something like 25,000 square miles of country, and it is almost everywhere within easy reach of water and railway communication. Now, when it is remembered that the coal-fields of Britain only cover, on the whole, an area of about 4,000 miles, and that nevertheless the output of this mineral in the mother country is upwards of 12,000,000 tons per annum, it would be difficult to overestimate the magnitude of the proportion to which the coal-fields of New South Wales may be expected to grow hereafter.

The great lung healer is found in that excellent medicine sold as Bickel's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It soothes and disinfects the sensibility of the membrane of the throat and air passages, and is a sovereign remedy for all coughs, colds, hoarseness, pain or soreness in the chest, bronchitis, etc. It has cured many when supposed to be far advanced in consumption.

—Wolfe in the balance, but not found wanting. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspepsia Cure has been weighed in that just balance, the experience of an impartial and intelligent public. Both remedially and pecuniarily it is a success.

Its sale constantly increases, testimony in its favor is daily pouring in. The question of its efficacy in dyspepsia, liver complaint, bilious ailments, and for blood impurity, is decided.

Diarrhoea's Ferry Tavern.

From the London Truth.

Sir Henry Edwards, who has just died, was at one time a prominent member of the Tory party in the House of Commons, and Mr. Disraeli used to call him his Lieutenant of the Forty Thieves, for by his affectionate epithet he used to characterize 40 speech supporters who always sat behind him in the House of Commons.

Sir Henry was a capital shot, and he was the first to introduce game driving, which he always held was the best method to increase the stock of birds.
