Now, this essential condition, that finger and eye work together, can never be so well learned by firing at first with ball cartridge, but should be practiced with an empty rifle. The first time the beginner fires in front of a target or other mark, it should be with blank cartridges, say five rounds. be acquainted with the theory of riflactions, and at last has come to mean some knowledge of them, by exciting his interest, tends to make the better shot. For instance, I have heard a man, when firing (or rather throwing away) ammunition at a target, remark, 'If that back sight was only away I could hit it every time.' Surely it would surprise him to know that at 6.00 yards his bullet was 23 feet high 600 yards his bullet was 23 feet high before it begun to descend, that it would actually have to travel 585 yards before it would strike a man six feet high, that his back sight was the means by which this was done, and that it was secessary in order to hit the object. that the force of gravity acts equally on rapidly ascending, is shortness of breath. the bullet when fired as if only drop. That means that the legs and arms are ped from the hand. Let me give an instance or two. Take three rifles the heart not having caught up, is with unequal charges of powder-say heart, before it begins to move rapidly 1 oz. 1 oz, and 2 oz.; fire them simul-enough to dispose of it. The undue taneously, and the balls will strike the burden suddenly put on the heart, and ground at the same time, though at varying distances. Again, take a rifle and place it in a horizontal position, at any distance above the ground. When fired, the bullet will strike the ground in exactly the same time as if it had been rolled out of the muzzle. There feetly sound, this exception will not cause disease. obey the eye, especially when standing. The word 'steadiness,' as applied to rifle shooting, is often misleading, for while a certain degree of steadiness is essential, yet practical rifle shooting does not entirely depend on being steady' as the word is generally used. If you desire to prove this, take a nine pound rifle and stand up at 200 or 300 yards before a 'bull's eye,' eight inches in diameter, in a stiff breeze, and try to hold it 'steady' on the bull's eye, eight inches in diameter, in a stiff breeze, and try to hold it 'steady' on the bull's eye.
