

DEW DROPS

Vol. IV.

TORONTO, JANUARY 6, 1900.

No. 1.

UNITED CHURCH
ARCHIVES

IN SNOWY WINTER.

This is a rather curious sight, isn't it? What are those funny-looking things perched upon those bars, do you suppose? I thought at first they were poor little sparrows, that had sought refuge from the cold, but concluded they were too large for such birds. So I guessed again and decided that they were fowls that have found a shelter from the biting, chilly blast. That looks like an old turkey on the top bar, don't you think? You see there has been a very heavy fall of snow, and the poor "chickies" had to get somewhere to keep out of the way of Mr. Frost.