It's over fifty years since this occurrence, but neither Friends nor foes ever learned whither he went or what became of him. From hence you may infer that the first specimen of State's Prison reform was a complete failure.

A SHORT SERMON.

"Owe no man anything." Keep out of debt. Avoid it as you would war, pestilence and famine. Hate it with a perfect hatred.— Abhor it with an entire abhorrence. Dig potatoes, break stones, peddle tinware; do anything that is honest and useful, rather than run into debt. As you value good digestion, a healthy appetite, a placid temper, a smooth pillow, pleasant dreams, and happy wakenings, keep out of debt. Debt is the hardest of all taskmasters, the most cruel of all oppressors. It is a milstone about the neck. It is an incubus on the heart. It spreads a cloud over the firmament of man's being. It furrows the forehead with premature wrin-kles; it plucks from the eye its light; it drags all nobleness and kindness out of the port and bearing of man. It takes all the soul out of his laugh, and all stateliness and freedom from his walk. Come not under its accursed dominion, nor ever be its slave. "Owe no man anything."

_ North British Worleman.

THE LADY WHO FAINTS .- Certainly the English will never have, in that line, such nice inventions as the French. The following may be taken as superlative of the kind; One day, in a law-suit before the Tribunal Correctionel, a handsome young lady, smartly dressed, was called as a witness. The Judge smarry dressed, was canted as a winters. In stage asked her name, and then put the question concerning her profession; "I am fainting." answered Madame in her weakest tone. The gallant disciple of Themis told an officer of the Court to bring her a chair, and allowed sufficient time for recovering. Then "Be not afraid, Madame," said he, "and please tell me, before you are sworn, what is your profession?" "I am fainting," again whispered the pretty witness, in a scarcely audible voice. This time the Vice-President then, bowing gracefully to the judge, looked at him, seemingly awaiting further questions. And again she was asked her profession; wondering and amazed sheanswered; "But Monsieur le President, I had already twice the honor to tell you that my profession is to faint." "To faint?" exclaimed the bench; "can that ever be a profession?" Madame answered in the affirmative and explained that she had gained a livelihood by going every evening, in fashionable dress, to a stall at the Theatre de la Porte Saint Martin," and fainting at the most tragical moment in the play. She added that her services were very valuable, and that the manager had never to complain of the manner in which she performed her part. Unhapply, by exposing thus publicly the pot aux roses her occupation was lost.—Paris Letter.

THE MEDITERRANEAN TELEGRAPH.—The portion of the Mediterranean Extension Telegraph Company's cable completed, consisting of 5821 miles, was successfully tested on Saturday, at Birkenhead. The new line will connect Cagliari with Malta and Corfu, and the entire length to be manufactured will consist of nearly 1000 miles. It is expected that the whole line will be submerged by the end of October.

the Collegiens, when it was first published, with a pleasure we have never forgotten, and which we have found increased at every repeated perusal. Ireland has produced many geniuses, but rarely one, upon the whole superior to Gerald Griffin."—Brownson's Review.

"Whoever wishes to read one of the most passionate and pathetic novels in English literature will take with him, during the summer vacation. The Collegians, by Gerald Griffin. The picture of Irish character and manners a half a century since in The Collegians, is masterly, and the power with which the fond, impetuous, passionate, thoroughly Coltic nature of Hardress Cregan is drawn, evinces rare genius. Griffin died young, but this one story, if nothing else of his, will surely live among the very best novels of the time. It is full of incident, and an absorbing interest allures the render to the end, and leaves him with a melted heart and moistened eye."

mencement of a complete edition of Gerald Griffin's works, embracing the 'Collegians' and the first series of 'his 'Munster Tales.' The nationality of these tales, and the genius of the author in depicting the mingled levity and pathos of Irish character, have rendered them exceedingly popular. The style in which the series is produced is highly creditable to the enterprise of the American publishers, and we are free to say that the volumes are worthy of being placed in our libraries, public or private, alongside of Irving, Cooper, or Scott."—Hunt's Merchant's Magazine.
