I am sure reproach of truckling to British power, under a if you will have the kindness to insert it in the next copy of the Church it will be read with vengeance when the aggression came from the weak and defenceless.

The bombardment and burning of Greytown is assumed by the official organ as a justifiable act of hostility against Great Britain in vindication of the Convention of April 19, 1850. It is contended that the town government of San Juan was established and organized under a grant from the Zamboe Chief called the King of Mosquito, which was signed by the British Consul. The continuance of the British protectorate was evinced in this act of the consul. The extirpation of the settlement was necessary to break up the protectorate and reassert our rights under the convention. The prompt action of the British naval authorities in the West Indies s upon their part clearly an acceptance of the issue. The Clayton and Bulwer convention was made, and by that instrument Great Britain bound herself to abandon that protectorate. But she does not abandon it; and Mr. Clayton subsequently explained that under the convention she was not bound to do so; that, in fact, a wrong construction had been given to the treaty, and that message from heaven with which the preacher so far as the question of territorial jurisdiction came commissioned, and to remember the duties was concerned, the treaty was a dead letter. ch that holy message entailed upon each Mr. Webster took the same view, but recommended that Greytown should be mutually I am not able, Mr. Editor, to give you even the heads of that discourse, excellent and impressive as it was. He considers the constant of the disease. He considers the constant of the disease. shock of the disease. He considers the term disease as a misnomer, for that it is merely an absence of vitality in the blood or sap of the plant, which, failing to receive its necessary amount of electricity from the air, constituted as it now is so deficient of that quality, returns to the tuber as inert or poisonous matter, and the vitality of the tuber thus unsupported perishes. He deems the only possible remedy to lie in the arresting of the downward progress of the sap before it reaches the tuber, either by immediately pulling up the haulms or cutting them off close to the earth. This remedy is not a new one; many parties state that they have tried it and not succeeded; but it will be found that in all cases where the haulms have been cut and the tubers have afterwards proved to be diseased, the fault lay in the delay of the application of the remedy. The moment that the haulms show symptoms of being affected, they should be cut off before the vitiated sap car reach the tuber. By this means Dr. Turley maintains that millions of pounds weight of this valuable esculent may be saved to the potat growers in his own neighbourhood.

The Gardeners' Chronicle contains tabular returns of the appearance of the crops from its correspondents in most parts of the kingdom. Of the result of these returns it gives the following summary:—"It will be seen that there is unusual promise of an abundant produce of wheat, and that oats and barley are good, much better than the very dry cold seed time led most of us to anticipate—that beans are very generally injured by blight and fly in the south-that the hay crop is unusually light, and much of it badly harvested—that the green crops generally promise well-and that there is a more general and earlier complaint of the potato disease than there has been for several past years. A rapid journey northwards from London, and through several of the eastern counties of Scotland, enable us to add our testimony to that of correspondents in Fifeshire, the Lothians, and Berwickshire as to the magnificent crops of all kinds which cover the ground. The turnips already very generally hide the land; the wheat is very fine, and the oats and barley are very good. Crops, too, are more forward as to ripeness in the Lothians and in Fifeshire than of applicants.

"On the morning of the ____ May, whilst cruising about the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, we alled a fishing-smack, which at first tried to get away from us; our captain sent a boat's crew o bring her to, which they speedily did. There vere only two men in her, and the captain had them some time on the quarter deck, and it was quickly reported that these men were ordered o pilot us up their own river. Sure enough we soon tacked about and steered up a narrow creek a boat's crew being a-head, sounding every yard, for fear of getting aground. . . . The first was kept up briskly, and rifle-balls dropping amongst us or whistling past us like hail. It was really wonderful so little damage was done. The balls cut the rigging, and went clean through the ship's side, but God Almighty had our lives in his keeping. I don't think there was a man aboard that new what fear was.

It's a strange feeling to come over you all at once that you have killed a man. He had unbuttoned his jacket, and was pressing his hand over the front of his chest where the wound was. He breathed hard; and the blood poured from the wound and also from his mouth every breath he took. His face was white as death, and his eyes looked so big and bright as he turned them and stared at me—I shall never forget it. He was my breast was so full, as though my own heart would burst. He had a real English face, and did not look like an enemy. What I felt I never can tell, but if my life would have saved his I believe I would have given it. The proprietor has been induced to make this offer in compliance with the urgent advice and repeated solicitations of his friends. For years past, the virtues of the above spring have been known to many residents in the immediate vicinity; and some of the medical officers of Her Majesty's forces, at different times stationed at Fort Malden, have given their opinion, that it was entitled to rank with Chittenham and other places of like character; in proof of which, several testimonials might be procured from respectable individuals who have tested its effi-

A further advantage in favour of the undertaking will be the almost certain termination of the Southern Railroad very near to the place described; affording to the traveller an agreeable and salubrious resting place. Nor is it devoid of historic incident. It was the scene of the capture of the schooner 'Ann," in 1837. Under the shady groves of its venerable oaks may be pointed out the humble edifice which contiguous to the above-mentioned premises, can also be leased on favourable terms.

The property is within an easy distance of Detroit, which city may be reached by Steam boats, during the navigation, in an hour; and if a good Hotel were opened here, the enterprising proprietor would soon find his most sanguine wishes realized. No epidemic nor maiignant disease has ever yet reached it. The scenery
