dinary existence, was the subject of the opening lecture of a course of six on Ibsen, by Edward Howard Griggs last night in the guild hall, McGill street. Peer Gynt never did anything good and never did anything good and never did anything bad, and was it neither for heaven nor hell. His potential self endured, in spite of all, in the faith, the hope and the love of Solweg. In the true woman, and the more truly she loved, there was always an element of motherhood, and it is this spiritual motherhood which Solweg represents in Ibsen's great drams.

Mr. Griggs laid stress on this element of the eternal feminine, ever leading upward, as a keynote in Ibsen, as well as in Goethe. Czar's Troops Successfully Pass Into Offensive All Along Battle Line.

ward, as a keynote in Ibsen, as well as in Goethe.

While our minds were over-burdened with the world struggle and we recognized the infinite waste, not only of our material, but of our spiritual heritage, Mr. Griggs thought it worth while to turn asine to study the most significant figure in the literature of the last 100 years. Not that Ibsen's philosophy was without defect, but he had such an influence on his contemporaries that he had to be regarded, if not as an Olympian, at least as a Titanic figure. He was late and slow in his development. All but one of the works to be 'studied in Mr. Griggs course were produced after he was fifty years of age, and all his great dramas were written after that time.

He was born, like Tolstoi, in the year 18'8. Tho born in Norway he had no Norwegian blood, but was Danish, German, and largely Scottish. The revolution of 1848 caught his imagination in the middle of his work as apprentice in a drug store. Ole Bull, the great violinist, picked him out to be director of the little theatre at Bergen, which Bull established there as the beginning of a national theatre. At 29 he married and went to Christiania to take charge of the National Theatre there. inues. went to Christiania to take charge of the National Theatre there.

Left Norway.

In six years he left Norway in connection with the war of Prussia against Denmark. He wrote a poem to arouse Norway and Sweden to assist Denmark. Norway would not fight unless France and England did, and these powers, doubtless to their present regret, refused to interfere. Prussia took the Provinces of Schleswig-Holstein and laid the foundation of the present world war.

Ibsen was so disgusted with his own people that he shook the dust of his native land from his feet, and betook imself to Italy. Here he wrote "Brand," the most scathing indictment of a nation ever penned. Norway accepted the composition, recognizing its justice. He eccurs to the Danish war in Peer Gynt, in the 4th act, where his carlcature of he German is a remarkable anticipation of the present day. The German annexes Peer Gynt's yacht simply because it is full of gold and he needs it. He utters this line, an interesting anticipation of the mood of the present kaiser:

Human Character.

After "Brand" there followed "Peer

Such wild and inconsistent conduct as comes from living in a world of fantasy was Mr. Griggs' explanation of Peer Gynt's rape of Ingrode, and the wild scene with the Satyr girls on the mountains was a parallel of the Walpurgis Night in Faust.

So to conduct oneself as to realize one's self appeared to Ibsen as the greatest possibility of human nature. Mr. Griggs hal, that perfect self-realization was utterly incompatible with selfishness. If one is sufficient to oneself it is Impossible to attain self-realization. The two are antithetic. Troll life ignored all outer claims and cut itself off from the rest of the world. It was living not a human life but troll life to isolate oneself from the rest of Humanity. Ibsen applied the story to Norway. Mr. Griggs remarked, amid audible smiles, that his audience might apply it where they pleased.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 30 .- The first harge of malfeasance against trust charge of malfeasance against trust company directors in the local courts is being heard before Justice Morrison in the suit which Miss Bertha Kory, of Bellingham, has brought against the directors of the Trades Trust Company. Miss Kory is suing for the return of $2500 which she alleges was improperly dealt with by the directors in the dying days of the company. The directors are Thomas Duke, president of the company, and a well-known politician, C. G. McLean, Kenneth Lamond, R. S. Lewington, John Thomson, Alex. Graham, A. N. Daykin, H. G. Scott, F. E. Elliott and C. E. Pitblado.

Sir Charles Tupper, for the plaintiff, charged that Pitblado assured Miss Kory that the company was guaranteed by the Bank of England, and that he would see that her money was invested for her in good mortgages. As a matter of fact, the money was used to pay off a pressing creditor.

Declaration of Premier Venize-

MARTIAL LAW APPLIED

Renewed Assurances of Faithfulness to Compact Soon to Be Given.

ATHENS, Sept. 30.-Greece is ready support Serbia should necessity for action in accordance with the terms of the alliance arise. This was the Crown Counsel Coyne Inti- declaration of Premier Venizelos before the Greek lower house today when the order for mobilization was ratified and an emergency loan of $30,- 000,000 authorized. The scene within the chamber as the premier announced the government's policy was a striking one. Numbers of Turks in turbans were notable among the forces opposed to the min-ister, while on the government benches were numerous Cretans in baggy blue bloomers, brilliant red sashes and embroidered jackets. Many held chaplets of amber beads. Everyone who entered the galleries, which were filled, was searched by soldiers for concealed weapons.

Except for the frequent outbursts of enthusiasm, impressive silence reign-ed in the chamber as Premier Venizelos read his declaration. Besides defining the Greek policy on mobiliza crown counsel, in a brief address to the court just before adjournment this tions in supporting Serbia.

Renewed assurance was to be given present month, he said, within the present month, he said, that Greece was ready to support Serbia if a casus foederis arose, but he sincerely hoped that a casus foederis would not present itself.

The chamber afterward passed a bill applying martial law to the Saloniki, Florina, Seres and Kavala districts, as well as to Athens and Pi-Drums Carrying Shipments to England Found to Be Defective.

LONDON, Sept. 30.-Replying in the nouse of commons today to charges that a heavy loss had been sustained thru defective methods in the shipthru defective methods in the shipment of oleum (acid) from the United States, Dr. Christopher Addison, parliamentary secretary of munitions, said that in the case of earlier shipments a certain amount of loss was due to the kind of drums used. These drums were similar to those usually employed, he said, and had been passed by an American state commission. The defects had long ago been remedied, he declared, and the delay was in no way prejudicial to the supplies of muniprejudiced to the supplies of munitions, as the stocks on hand at the time were adequate. Nothing was paid to the owner of the ships for damage to the vessels carrying the olemage to the owner of the ships for damage to the vessels carrying the oleum, but the government had purchased two damaged ships. The oleum, he added, was supplied by Baring Bros. and the C. T. Bowring Co.
