That Tired Feeling

Makes you seem "all broken up," without life, ambition, energy or appetite. It is often the forerunner of serious illness, or the accompaniment of nervous troubles. It is a positive proof of thin, weak, impure blood; for, if the blood is rich, red, vitalized and vigorous, it imparts life and energy to every nerve, organ and tissue of the body. The necessity of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for that tired feeling is therefore apparent to every one, and the good it will do you is equally beyond question. Remember

Chicago, Nov. 7.—At the close of today's half session the wheat market rested with just a shade better prices quoted than at the end of yesterday. But from the opening action was rapid and most erratic. Liverpool's advance of 1½d to 2d did not meet expectations, and although there was a bull feint at the start the disappointment at the absence of vigor abroad soon found expression in a swift decline of almost Ic. At the expiration of the first hour an advance which was of the first hour an advance which was ascribed to Bradstreet's report that only 22,000,000 bu available for export remained in 22,000,000 bu available for export remained in this country, set in. It grew in force until 2 ic rise from the inside was scored. The New York bank statement made a poor showing for the week, and when it was properly digested there was a slump of ic. After that fluctuations were narrow, and at the close only a slight improvement. Corn—The strong tone and appreciating ability of wheat had a strengthening effect on corn, but the action of the market was about the same as has been noted of late. While the prices advanced the the market was about the same as has been noted of late. While the prices advanced the improvement made showed little if any increase, and the undertone was not bupyant. Oats—Only a light business was transacted.

In answer to a question from the police magistrate, Chief Williams said Davis came here from St. Louis, Mo. The police magistrate remanded him until Wednesday, after finding him guilty upon this charge. Jacob Harris, charged with attempting to poison the horses of Samuel Leff, was the next case, and it was a lengthy one. Prof. Harrison said he had analyzed a portion of the mixture brought to him, which was mixed with oats, and of a pink color. He said he examined about five drams, and this had contained about 150 grains of arsenic. A very small quantity was necessary to cause death. Samuel Leff, 105 Clarence street, told his story to Mr. McKillop, as follows: He, with his father and brother, were sitting in the kitchen, watching, as Harris had promised to do them injury. They had sat up every night after the burning of the barn. As they sat waiting, they heard a sound, as though something had struck the tin boiler, which had been placed in an old democrat wagon for the purpose of feeding the horses, a short distance from the gate. They heard a wagon stop, and, going out, they saw Jacob Harris and Essery Walenpeanski going out of the yard, and heard Harris say: "Hurry up; the door is being opened.' Mr. E. Meredith conducted the case for Harris, and put Leff through a most severe cross-examination. Left said the three of them sat up to catch someone, as Harris had promised to make it cost them something. He admitted having had a great deal of trouble with several parties, and told Mr. Meredith that his father had found the stuff in the boiler when they went to feed the horses. He had taken some of it to the police station and some to the druggist.

Wm. Leff corroborated the story of his brother Sam, and said Waleneansky was his father-in-law, and that they were not friends. Walenpeansky did not live with his wife. She was at present in the old country. He had seen Harris in the wa-gon, and heard him call out, "Hurry

Moses Leff, the father, saw both men in the wagon, but did not go out. Minnie Johnston, a neighbor, saw a wagon standing in front of Leff's house at 11:20 on the Saturday night in question. The wagon was a blue Mr. Fox gave the party, in one, and the horse black. Edith Leff, the sister, swore to having seen Jacob Harris and Wolenpeansky together about 10 o'clock, near the Tecumseh.

The defense proved an alibi without much trouble. Samuel Jacobs swore he went to Harris' house between 6 and 7 o'clock, and remained there until 2 or 3 Sunday morning, playing cards. Neither of the Harrises nor Walenpeansky had gone out. Simon Trichbout, a Detroit optician, had gone to Harris' house at 6 or 7 o'clock and had played cards until 2 or 3 the next morning. Both the men whom Leff said he had seen about 12 o'clock were in the house playing cards with him at the time. They had played until 2 or 3 on the Sunday morning Ruben Gorden had called at Harris' house about 11 p.m. and saw the men playing cards.

The testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schwartz, who swore to being at the house, and that the men had not left it that night, closed the case. The magistrate summed the case up oriefly, stating that the evidence for the defense had been very strongly in favor of the men, as it showed them to have been at home. He then

> A BLIND BRGLAR. From the London Chronicle.

The Leass police have in custody James William Lawson, 19, son of an independent lady, and Ernest Ingham, 17, son of a coal merchant, both of Armley. Lawson is blind, but he has displayed mechanical skill and resource. In a chest of drawers in his bedroom was found a large quantity of tools, identified as the proceeds of a burglary at the silk mills of Lawson's uncle at Upper Wortley. Under a loose board was found a quantity of jewelry and fifteen skeleton keys. In a small room which Lawson used as a workshop, the officers discovered 30 loose padlocks, door and box locks, which had been broken off various premises. A square iron plate in one of the walls ved to be the door of a safe which had been let into the wall and was full of stolen tools. Lawson's mother stated that notwithstanding his blindness, he fixed the thing himself, telling her that it was a ventilator.

How He Has Prospered and Paid Off His Debts and Yet "Kept the Sabbath Day Holy."

To the Editor of The Advertiser: There has been a letter in your columns from a city milkman relating to the Sunday delivery of milk, and, while I do not wish to hurt any person's feelings. I ask the favor of an opportunity to correct a few mistakes that occur in his letter. In the first place, it appears to be much out of place for any milkman to cast slurs upon Mr. Wilson, the Presbyterian minister, who so notey stood up for the rights of milkmen by assisting them to throw off the chains of slavery with which the Sunday delivery of milk fast has them bound. If more of our ministers would more prominently advocate the rights of the Sabbath it would help to scatter the dark cloud that rests upon the nations for their desecration of the Lord's Day.
Mr. Learn takes exception to Mr. Wilson's proposal with regard to supplying milk for invalids and children. Mr. Wilson undoubtedly gave the best idea he had, and along with his suggestion I should fike to give my experience. I have supplied milk for invalids and babies, and though I have never delivered it on Sunday, it never falled to give satisfaction and prove successful. In proof of this assertion, I am prepared to give to any individual instances where such has been the case.

Mr. Learn asserts that because the cows give milk on Sunday it is right to deliver it on Sunday. He might as well argue that because the wheat grows on Sunday it is right to take it to market on Sunday. It becomes necessary to prove that it is practicable to keep milk palatable and wholesome from Saturday evening until after tea on Sunday, as customers can be supplied before breakfast on day morning. This I have done in my previous letters. It has also been argued by some milkmen that they would prefer to deliver on Sunday morning, rather than work until 11 o'clock on Satur-This argument might be urged with as much justice by grocers and other tradesmen who have to deliver late on Saturday evening. One would judge from the general tenor of Mr. Learn's letter that milkmen are a few of God's outcasts, for Mr. Johnson's pulpit that day.

I have generally found that men supplying me with milk desired their Sunday morning mess for their own use, making butter. etc. Mr. Learn spoke of the loss of Sunday milk to large cow owners. It is almost needless to say that large owners have other avenues of disposal beyond supplying milkmen, such as Devonshire and raw cream, making butter, and supplying cheese factories This is the hour for the milkmen to take a decided stand for liberty in this matter. Let them at once solicit their customers, and ask them to give Saturday delivery a fair trial, and when it is seen that milkmen are anxious to help themselves, the public will come to their assistance, and should there be a few milkmen who persist in Sunday delivery, the council can then be applied to with confidence
