THE APPEAL FOR RECRUITS

The searching analysis of duty and of motive by such speakers as Mrs. Netta B. Brown and Sergt. Knight cannot fail to have an effect upon the manhood of St. John. The man who is fit and unincumbered and is not in uniform is having uncomfortable moments. He will have more of them when the women take a more active part in the recruiting campaign, as they are about to do in this city and have begun to do in some other parts of the province. The young man who keeps his hat on when the National Anthem is being played, and makes sneering remarks when earnest speakers are appealing for recruits, will have more of them when the women take a more active part in the recruiting campaign, as they are about to do in this city and have begun to do in some other parts of the province. The young man who keeps his hat on when the National Anthem is being played, and makes sneering remarks when earnest speakers are appealing for recruits, will have more of them when the women take a more active part in the recruiting campaign, as they are about to do in this city and have begun to do in some other parts of the province.

A BRAZEN ANNOUNCEMENT

The most brazen attempt ever made to cheat the people of Canada and give the present government an extended lease of power after the war is over without an appeal to the people is foreshadowed in the following Ottawa despatch to the St. John Standard:

Ottawa, Sept. 14—"An extension of the life of parliament until some time after the war, if not, an election right away."

This seems to sum up the leading question in political circles today, and this seems to be the general attitude of the Conservative party.

So if the Liberals will not agree to an extension of the life of the present parliament, it is fairly certain that there will be a general election ere long.

What will probably happen is that when Sir Wilfrid Laurier is better, Sir Robert Borden will pay one of his little personal visits to his personal friend, the Liberal chieftain, and he will put the proposition before him. To this, no doubt, Sir Wilfrid will agree, for the country would hardly forgive him if he forced an election in war time.

If the opposition agrees to an extension a short session of parliament in the late fall to secure the necessary legislation may be anticipated with a regular session at the end of January or the beginning of February. It is evident that the government will not allow itself to be caught napping towards the limit of the parliamentary term. Conservative members are not likely to forget how Sir Charles Tupper was caught in this way and defeated.

Why should there be an extension of the life of parliament until some time after the war? Nobody with an ounce of patriotism wants to distract the minds of the people from their great common task during the war, but after it is over, and the parliamentary term has expired, have they not a right to say who shall govern them?

The last two sentences of the above despatch give away the whole case. The government does not want to be "caught napping." It remembers that Sir Charles Tupper was defeated when he went to the country.

That is to say, the Borden government are not trust the people, and will endeavor to frighten the Liberals by threats of an election and secure their consent to an extension of the life of the government for a considerable period after the war.

The bluff will not work. The present parliamentary term does not expire until October. If then the war is not over, it will be easy to make an agreement to prolong the life of parliament until it is over; but the Liberals have a right and certainly will not consent to usurp the people's functions and extend the life of the government any longer than the exigencies of war demand. The threat that if Sir Wilfrid Laurier does not consent, the country will be thrown into the turmoil and bitterness of a political campaign, and the blame for it thrown upon the Liberals will neither dismay the Liberals nor deceive the country. We want no elections till after the war, but if the Conservatives think they can use the war and the patriotic sentiments of the people to further their party ends they are very much mistaken. To a certain type of politician found in the Conservative ranks nothing is sacred or worthy of consideration that cannot be manipulated to party advantage. If Sir Robert Borden yields to the demands of this type, he must take the consequences.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

The Montreal Financial Times makes the following remarks on the subject of unemployment in Canada:—"The general belief among business men, a belief which is fully supported by observation of conditions in Montreal and other large cities, is that unemployment is not nearly as serious as some interested parties would have it supposed, and that it consists very largely of the money and obviously unemployed. It is a universal experience of social workers and economic students that following upon a period of real unemployment and hardship, the sufferings resulting from which are largely unobserved because the public attention has not been attracted to the subject and the victims do not themselves realize that they are suffering from a general economic condition, there comes a time when the I-Won't-Work comes out of his lair and boldly demands of the charitable societies, of the police and of the pedestrian in the street that he be supported by donations. By the time this occurs the real victims of unemployment, who have been conducting a genuine search for jobs in the meanwhile, have usually gone back to work."

Inability to make a distinction between the deserving man out of work and the man who does not want or will not remain at work, together with a lack of legal machinery to deal effectively with the latter, are at the root of much unwise expenditure by charitable organizations. In St. John we send vagrants to jail, but we have to feed them. Drunkards who should be earning their living and supporting their families we treat in like manner, if they fall into the hands of the police. When the province has an industrial farm for men who will not work anywhere else, and power to send them there on an indeterminate sentence, the really deserving, who are out of work, will get more consideration and more genuine help to help themselves. There is no great lack of employment in the maritime provinces, nor is there much likelihood of serious conditions in that respect. But we should have the industrial farm for the I-Won't-Work.

The street railway dispute has entered upon a new phase. There will be a nice bill for someone to pay.

Mrs. Netta B. Brown said last night that she found some difficulty in making good the reputation given her by the press in advance of her coming. Well, she made good.

This afternoon's meeting in the board of trade rooms should result in a more general interest in the recruiting campaign. Twelve recruits after such a meeting as that of last night, following over a week of great meetings, does not indicate that the people are yet aroused to a sense of the real danger that threatens Canada.

Premier Asquith admits that the British government is considering the question of conscription, but has not yet reached a decision. The Premier of New South Wales recently declared that if the appeal for recruits were not properly met, "there would be no alternative but to take these young loafers and compel them to perform the duty which they were leaving to braver and better men." Rather straight talk—that.

The appeal which is about to be made to some six or seven hundred citizens to make a regular fixed contribution per month to the Red Cross Society will no doubt meet with a satisfactory response. The work of the Red Cross must appeal to every man and woman, for it has to do with the sick and wounded soldiers who would otherwise suffer untold agony and have little chance of regaining their health and strength. The Red Cross Fund should be made adequate to meet every demand. It is carefully administered and is worthy of the most generous support.

Barry Sullivan, tragedian, was playing in "Richard III." at Shrewsbury on one occasion. When the actor came to the lines "A horse, a horse! My kingdom for a horse!" some one in the pit called out "Wouldn't a donkey do, Sullivan?" "Yes," replied the tragedian, turning quickly on the interloper. "Please come round to the stage door."

Don't Use Dangerous Antiseptic Tablets

It is an unnecessary risk. Use the safe antiseptic and germicide, Absorbine, Jr.—it kills germs quickly and surely without any possibility of harmful results; made of pure herbs, non-poisonous and there is no danger whatever if the children get hold of the bottle. It retains its germicidal powers even when diluted one part of Absorbine, Jr., to 100 parts water. The germicidal properties of Absorbine, Jr., have been tested and proven both in laboratory and actual practice. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Found the Way
"How in the world did you come to marry a woman doctor?"
"Well, you see, she operated upon me for appendicitis, and was so gentle that I just naturally fell in love with her."

"Which seems to prove the truth of the old saying that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach?"

On the Job
Peddler—I have a most valuable book to sell, madam; it tells one how to do anything.
Lady (sarcastically)—Does it tell one how to get rid of a pestering peddler?
Peddler (promptly)—Oh, yes, madam! Buy something from him.

"I am a firm believer in advertising," said a great advertising expert. "I impute a great part of my own success to it."

"When a duck lays an egg," he said, "she waddles back to the duck pond in indifferent silence. But when a hen lays an egg her frantic cackles make it known."

"The hen advertises."

"And that, my dear friend, is why the world eats hen's eggs instead of duck eggs!"

A Sentence Neatly Expressed
There is a great deal in putting a thing nicely. A prisoner was sentenced some time ago.

"You have a pleasant home and a bright fire, with happy children sitting around it, haven't you?" asked the judge.

"Yes, sir," said the prisoner, who thought he saw a way out of the difficulty.

"Well," said the judge, "if the happy children sit around the cheerful fire until you return, they will stay there just forty-two days."

The Main Dilemma
The manager of a factory recently engaged a new man and gave instructions to the foreman to instruct him in his duties. A few days afterward the manager inquired whether the new man was progressing with his work.

"The foreman," who had not agreed very well with the man in question, exclaimed, "I know and he is still as ignorant as I."
