ANOTHER INTERDICT GETS DRUNK

Brother, in Stating Case, Brings Up Question of Profanity in Streets By Sober Men

To use the words of Judge Ritchie, a powerful temperance lesson might be learned from the array of men on the prisoner's bench this morning. Almost every one of them was charged with drunkenness, two of them Sunday offenders. There were seven in all, and each pleaded guilty.

John Harris pleaded guilty to having assaulted Jacob Carriere in Main street on Saturday, when Carriere had gone to his house to collect a bill. A fine of $20 or two months in jail was imposed.

Fines of $8 were imposed on Bradford Mann, George McNeil, and Alex Walker for drunkenness, while Theo. McCann, Joseph Elliott, and Thomas Boyle on the same charge were remanded. Boyle was also charged with resisting, while McCann had a charge of profanity entered against him.

Elliott told the court that on Saturday he had been contemplating a trip up river, and had purchased for refreshment purposes two quarts of whiskey. The rain interfered with his plans, he got drunk, and was arrested. He and Boyle were the two men arrested yesterday.

In the case of McCann, his brother was present, and pleaded for him, saying that he had been sober at tea time on Saturday, but a man had called for him, and at 10 o'clock, in spite of the fact that he was an interdict, the prisoner was intoxicated. The defendant's brother contended that the police were negligent in their duties as regards placing men, even sober men, under arrest for swearing on the streets, stating that he had frequently heard men in their sober senses blaspheming horribly on the streets, and had often wondered why they were not arrested.

His Honor replied that a citizen could report another for using the Saviour's name in vain, while the police had the liberty of arresting him. He agreed that there was a great deal of profanity allowed to go unchecked in the streets.

REMARKABLE TURN GIVEN LIQUOR CASE

Mr. McGuire, on Stand, Speaks of Friend of Dykeman Seeking to Make Deal to End the Matter

The case against Martin McGuire, reported for selling liquor to a minor, Frank Dykeman, was continued this morning in the police court, and after several witnesses were examined, was postponed until Wednesday morning. Mrs. Albert Dykeman, mother of the young man, testified that he would be twenty-one years of age in January next. Dykeman Lee said that when he arrested Dykeman the latter told him that he was twenty-one years old, at first, and later said that he was twenty.

Mr. McGuire said his clerk, John Doyle, said they had no recollection of having seen Dykeman in the store or selling liquor to him.

The defendant told the court that one of Dykeman's friends had tried to persuade him that if the prisoner's fine was paid by him (witness), Dykeman would swear that he was of age. The defendant asked for time to get witnesses, and the case was postponed. G. A. Henderson prosecuted.

The New York Herald says: "Mrs. Davis has accompanied Captain Davis on six long voyages and has travelled 60,000 miles aboard the Comet. The Comet, in passing Cape Hatteras ten days ago, was struck by a northwest gale that carried away eleven sails in as many minutes. The ship brought a cargo of firecrackers and general merchandise." Captain and Mrs. Davis are expected in St. John towards the end of this week to visit Mrs. Davis' family.

WEDDED TODAY

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Holy Trinity Church at 6.30 o'clock, when Rev. J. J. Walsh united in marriage Henry McGuire and Miss Mary O'Connor, daughter of Mrs. Margaret O'Connor, of 38 Spring street. Miss O'Connor had her sister, Miss Katherine O'Connor, as bridesmaid, and Albert Brennan supported the groom. The bride, who was given away by her brother, William O'Connor, was gowned in a princess costume of pongee silk, with a floral picture hat. Her bridesmaid wore a silk princess gown, while the maid of honor wore a gown of tulle. After a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's mother, Mr. and Mrs. McGuire left on the D. A. K. steamer Prince Rupert for a wedding trip in Nova Scotia. They will reside in this city. Some handsome wedding gifts were received.
