MISSING JEWELS FOUND IN CANADA

Hon. Mrs. Blythe Recovers Pearls Lost on Way From Quebec to England.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Information has been received from Canada that the $35,000 pearl necklaces recently lost by the Hon. Mrs. E. R. Blythe, of Byter street, St. James's, has been recovered. The necklaces, for which a reward of $5,000 had been offered, was lost by Mrs. Blythe during her journey from Quebec to England.

Some days before she left Canada Mrs. Blythe broke the string of pearls at Lake Louise. She tied it up in one of her handkerchiefs and put it in her jewel case, but on arriving in London, after a journey from Quebec, it was missing with the handkerchief.

The jewels were in the box when it was examined at Quebec before departure.

ROME VISIT OF KEEN INTEREST

Miss Mary E. O'Brien, of Fairville, Speaks of Journeyings.

She and Miss Margaret O'Brien Were in Party Received by the Pope.

Miss Mary E. O'Brien of Fairville, who was one of a party recently returned from Rome, gave a reporter an interesting summary of their visit to the Eternal City and of their tour of European countries. She and Miss Margaret O'Brien, also of Fairville, and Miss Katherine McCann of Fredericton traveled together, and joined a United States pilgrimage in New York, and proceeded to Cherbourg, then by rail to Lisieux, Lourdes, Paris and Marseille. At the latter place they ascended to the famous De la Garde church, the shrine of the sailors, and one of the most picturesque places of the seaport city.

Then they went to Nice, the beautiful winter resort of Southern France. While there they motored to Monte Carlo, in the Principality of Monaco, by the Upper Cornice road, often reaching an altitude of 1,200 to 1,600 feet above the sea level. This gave an excellent view of the beautiful scenery around the Mediterranean. After visiting Genoa—the birthplace of Christopher Columbus—they spent eight days in Rome.

IN ETERNAL CITY.

Rome was much crowded with pilgrims from all parts of the world. The beautiful basilicas of St. Peter's, St. Paul's, St. John Lateran, St. Mary's Major, the Vatican, with its wonderful treasures in paintings and sculpture, the Colosseum, and many places of interest to the visitors.

RECEIVED BY POPE.

On Aug. 7 the provincials, who also included Mr. Hamilton of Moncton and Miss Florence Coleman of the County Hospital staff, were received in audience by the Pope, and they were also present at the mass of His Holiness in the Chapel of the Beatifications, to which 5,000 pilgrims had been invited.

After leaving Rome, they proceeded to Florence, one of the most beautiful cities of the Old World, then Venice, with its beautiful Byzantine, Gothic and Renaissance palaces and cathedral, the Doge's Palace, and the famous Bridge of Sighs, and by no means least the curious old gondolas. Milan was next visited, and then Switzerland, where they were entertained in Lausanne and Geneva with a sail on Lake Geneva. An interesting place was the headquarters of the League of Nations at Geneva.

BET SAINT JOHN PRIESTS.

While in Lyons they were pleased to meet Rev. Fathers Roy McDonald and Milligan of Saint John.

In Paris their time was given to much sightseeing, especially to the churches and Louvre Museum. During their stay in Paris a motor trip was taken to Versailles, where they went to the palace in which the peace treaty was signed. En route there the home of Napoleon was an interesting place to them, with its beautiful gardens and historic treasury.

In Belgium they were in Brussels, and visited the famous lace manufac-

WOULD SETTLE DIFFERENCES

Salvation Army Officers Reported in New York on Mission.

Said to Be Emissaries of General for Adjustment With Commander Eva Booth.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—An attempt to reconcile the differences between commander Evangelist Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States, and General Bramwell Booth, her brother, who at his London headquarters directs all the affairs of the Army, is being made by two emissaries of General Booth, who arrived in this country a week ago. Just what progress has been made in the negotiations is not learned.

The representatives of General Booth are Commissioner Edward J. Higgins, chief of staff of the Salvation Army, and Commissioner Lamb, also attached to the London headquarters. They have been staying at the Hotel Algonquin, and Miss Booth has also been staying there. They selected this hotel, popular with theatrical folk, for their negotiations instead of the army headquarters here so that their mission might be kept secret.

Miss Booth's friends have feared that she would be removed in about a year when her extension of three years as head of the army here will have been completed. She was removed three years ago, but so many protests were made by members of the Salvation Army here and others interested in her work, that after about a year she was given orders to remain here until next spring. It was General Booth's intention when he announced her removal not to appoint anyone to succeed her as director of all the army posts in the United States, but to leave the work in charge of three commissioners in the three chief districts into which this country is divided.

General Booth has continually alighted his sister's work, her friends say. Commissioner Higgins denied that his mission had anything to do with Miss Booth's tenure of office, although

THE ELIXIR OF LIFE.
(Chicago Journal of Commerce.)

In the belief of the alchemists of the middle ages there existed not only a substance that would transmute base metals into gold, but there also existed a substance that would make a man immortal. This substance, always sought but never found, was called "the elixir of life."

In time the belief sprang that this elixir of life consisted of water to be drunk at a magical fountain. In the fourteenth century there lived a wanderer who contributed to the spread of this belief. There is doubt as to what his real name was, but he wrote under the name of Sir John Mandeville. In his celebrated book, "The Voyage and Travel of Sir J. Mandeville," he asserted that he himself had drunk three times at this fountain of youth and had felt marvellously refreshed. But perhaps the taste palled on him, for he did not return to the fountain often enough to survive to this day.

Other statements authenticating the existence of the fountain of youth were attributed to Prester John (or Priest John), the legendary Christian prince of Central Asia. In the twelfth and thirteenth centuries a story was circulated to the effect that Prester John had touched for the existence of the fountain of youth.

The belief in this fountain lasted during the entire middle ages and even later. In the year 1513, Prince de Leon, the Spanish explorer, set out at the age of 33 to find the fountain of youth. His place of departure was Porto Rico. His goal was a large island said to lie to the northwest. By that journey he discovered Florida, landing at a place somewhat north of the site of the present St. Augustine.

Fourteen days after his death Ponce de Leon did not realize he had landed on a large island. He knew only he had found the fountain of youth. Nobody has found it since. Not in a fountain nor in anything else has anyone discovered the elixir of life.
