ons, that given to Mr. Hazen being sub-nors hearty and general. The hissing orps of the disappointed sour grape grits forked with a will when Mr. Skinner ppeared, and while he was speaking, but hey failed in the object they had in speech and asked for the supp view, for instead of hissing Mr. Skinner down they were completely drowned out by the cheers of his friends and were compelled to coil up and be quiet. When Mr. Ellis came in some one proposed three cheers, but there was only material in the crowd for one, and that didn't raise the roof by any means.

their hissing. It did not do them justice, and he would appeal to their intelligence, if they had any. In the midst of the uproar the chairman, Mr. Shaw, rose and is shouted himself hoarse in trying to obtain, order and at last told the hissers that Mr. Weldon asked that they might be quiet. The hissing was then quieted down but Mr. Skinner's friends cried "No, no," and Mr. Skinner stood out bravely for his rights and said No. I do not and I will not speak here by leave Mr. Weldon. Hiss me down if you can, but if you dare, the party who does the hissing today to strangle free speech will be driven like a wreck from the polls (cheers and prolonged applause.) Mr. Skinner then concluded his able speech showing plainly the advantages of the government's policy to the country at large.

Mr. C. W. Weldon was the next speaker. His reception was not noticeable in the uproar that prevailed among the gang who had hissed in vain. Refering to Mr. Skinner, he said, he would quarrel with no man for honestly changing his views, but then he should have resigned. (A voice, "Why didn't Ellis resign when the Telegraph read him out of the party?" (cheers).

Mr. Weldon in continuing, denied that the voters list should have been revised instead of, as he said, depriving 120,000 young men of their votes.

A voice, "Did you vote for the franchies bill?"

"No, I did not." (cheers and laughter).

Mr. Ellis and laughter.)

Mr. Ellis registed that he would give the position to one of our own people. The expenditure for militia purposes could be cut down. In concluding he said he felt Canada wanted a market, and if the customs barriers were thrown he said he felt Canada wanted a market, and if the customs barriers were thrown he said he felt Canada wanted a market, and if the customs barriers were thrown he said he felt Canada wanted a market, and if the customs barriers were thrown he said he felt Canada wanted a market, and if the customs barriers were thrown he said he felt Canada wanted a market, and if the customs barriers were thrown

The Law Enforced

A law was enforced today by custom collector Ruel, which will interfere greatly with vessels going to the West Indies from this port during the winter months. When the papers of the schooner Adeline were taken to the Custom House today is clear that vessel for St George, Grenada, the captain was informed that he could not clear the vessel for St George, Grenada, the captain was informed that he could not clear the vessel for the West Indies from this port during the winter months. When the papers of the schooner Adeline were taken to the Custom House today to clear that vessel for St George, Grenada, the captain was informed that he could not clear the vessel of the West Indies, with a deckload on board more than six inches above the rail. The law has not been enforced before but the occasters' attention was drawn to the matter a short time since and as the Adelene has been the first vessel to clear since, her owners will have to suffer.

wretches who have insulted the ex-empress."

The North German Gazette regrets the ill humor of the French press and says it is a serious matter that the ex-Empress Frederick should be grossly insulted and threatened without a word of protest from the public.

Tagblatt says this is Germany's final attempt to conciliate France.

The Post says Germany will maintain a reserved attitude, but the incident will evidently bring the necessity fer a struggle nearer.
