Kang Yu Wai, the Chinese Statesman Seeks Protection Here.

After Becoming Chief Adviser of the Emperor He Is Forced to Flee.

His Excellency's Story of a Romantic Career in the Orient.

The Idzumi Maru, which tied up at the outer wharf last evening brought as a passenger the illustrious Chinese reformer Kang Yu Wai, who has been in the very vortex of the revolutionary storm centre of the Orient. His arrival in Victoria marks the final step in his temporary expulsion from the troubled land in which of late he has shared equal minence with Li Hung Chang. When the Maru docked last night and Mong Kow, of the customs house staft passed aboard her, it became evident that some passenger of more than ordinary interest was aboard, for the large rowd of Chinamen were soon engaged the most animated gesticulations and "kow-towing." The centre and object of their attention was a young man, a little above the average height, with pronounc-Mongolian features, but with intelligence and forcefulness written on every ament of his countenance. Although 35 or 40 years of age, he has seen fact that he is still in existence only the incessant vigilance of himself and' devoted friends. The illustrious stranger was, until last ar, the minister of the interior for pubworks, and the confidential adviser the deposed Emperor. The revoluon which has lately shaken China to its entre was in part due to Kang, for so veening were the reforms which he sugsted to the Emperor that the old party, e Tories of Cathay, headed by the Emame alarmed and plotted so successfully against the dynasty that the Emperor vas dethroned, six or seven of Kang's lleagues beheaded, and Kang himself ely escaped with his life.

Mong Kow took charge of the enter-tainment of his distinguished countryman, and last night and to-day he is neeting the leading men of Chinatown. Kang is accompanied by his private secor three days, after which he will visit | when the ice breaks, Deveral other cities, his programme being kept secret. The story of his career is of engrossing nterest, but as it has already been pubished in these columns in mail advices from the Orient, it need be no more than outlined now. He is a native of Canton, where his father was a merchant. His of sufficient neans to give him, who early exhibited signs of ability, a more comprehensive youth of China. While at school i Hongkong he imbibed European ideas, while he had exemplified, through the dium of the British administration at that port, the procedure and practice of British law and civil service. A few ears ago he passed the third or final examination, which gave him personal acess to His Excellency the Emperor. Here he found for the first time that the orts, which as a subordinate he had rwarded through the higher officials to court, had never reached the monarch all, but had been suppressed by his listers, who feared the effect of his dical suggestions on the Imperial mind. his fact only confirmed him in his demination to use his influence with the peror to rid the country of the inbus under which it suffered from in tient and corrupt officials. Here he remained for several months, but failing the machinations of his enemies pursued him even to a British port, he fled to Tokio. Thence he proceeded to Yokohama, and with his private secretary quietly shipped on the Idzumi Maru, not disclosing his identity until the steamer was far out to sea. Although Kang is now an exile from his native land, he has by no means given up hope of its reformation. He regards the present government as but a temporary one, and anticipates an early return to China when the Emperor is restored to power. He continued going from bad to worse till an operation had to be performed. Nothing seemed to do him any good, and, as he says himself, 'I had made up my mind to suffer torture to my dying die!" But one day Mr. Brayley saw an ad. vertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, and he determined to give them a trial. He took one box, then another, then anotha er, till he finished four boxes. By that time he began to get decided relief, and he continued taking them until all the pain had left his back.

"Now I am as limber as an eel," says e. "Instead of getting up a dozen times at night, I never get up more than nce. My urine was thick with mucous. but now it is perfectly clear and has no ediment of any kind. health officer. THE WIDEMAN CASE of Eternity. Inflammatory Rheumatism Held Him Bedfast for Five Months-Friends Were Sure He Would Die-Dodd's K dney Pills Cured Him,

Duntroon, Ont., April 7.-Crippled, utterly helpless, with both legs paralyzed, his entire body swollen, and tender and inflamed, bed-sores eating his flesh away, agonizing pains darting in all directions through his frame, unable to change his position in bed, or even to lift his hand without pain. Such was the terrible condition of Mr. A. N. Wideman, of Nottawanaga Township but a few short months ago. For five long, terrible oonths he lay bed-fast-with the dagger of pain deep in his vitals.

To-day he is well and strong, His ufferings are only a memory. What caused this change? Mr. Wideman says it was Dodd's Kidney Pills. His doctor failed to do him any good. The medicine he gave him only made his teeth break off. His friends believed he would die. His doctor had no hope of his recovery. His body was swollen and inflamed, he could not bear to be touched, could not urn in bed. Bed-sores covered his back; one of them was poulticed 500 times be fore it healed. His legs were twisted so that the toes pointed inwards. He lost forty pounds in weight. Words cannot describe agony like this. One day a friend, Mrs. John Boyer, persuaded him to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. He did so, and soon began to feel better. He bought a supply of this wonderful medicine, and used it regularw, with the result we have stated. This is a case that stands without a arallel in the history of medicine in ed such a cure. But Dodd's Kidney Pills have never yet failed. Quick drying of insulations is effected by German electrical manufacturers at ordinary temperatures by placing the ob-
