SCHLATTER, THE HEALER. More Information About a Very Interesting Personage.

Schlatter, of the man who is now in the city and who has attracted some attention by assuming that name, is having some little difficulty in securing a hall in which to hold meetings. He has endeavored to engage the Mechanic's Institute, but could not make satisfactory terms, and he has also spoken in regard to the Opera House. In a composed state of mind, this man, who, although he claims to be the only great and original divine healer, speaks in a sensible way. His conversation shows a strong current of religion and his statements are satisfactory, but under the least excitement he opens out and almost conveys the impression of an escaped lunatic. On Bible subjects he is shapless, but when it comes to a business point he is heard at his best, and displays a keenness that would do credit to many a hard headed business man. Although the "healer" by his own statement does not want money, has no use for it, and would only give it away, he stuck out so determinedly for three-quarters of the gross receipts of his meetings that no arrangement was made with him by those to whom he applied. In endeavoring to impress his many attractive points, Schlatter, or McLean, or the impostor, whatever he may be, made some very extravagant statements. He spoke of the eagerness displayed by Helen Gould, Mrs. Carnegie, Mrs. Potter Palmer and others to marry him, most of them offering large sums of money. He says that once in his life he made a mistake when his admirers persuaded him to dress fashionably. He even fell to the point where diamonds are worn, and by doing so injured his cause. This was a severe blow to him. He now wishes some unmarried man to act as his manager so that to him may be sent all those ladies who are anxious to be married.

In connection with this affair the Anacosta Standard has the following:

Rev. Charles McLean, who was in Moncton last March, posing as "Schlatter," the divine healer, and who was exposed by the Standard and driven out of Butte, is in trouble.

In the Associated Press dispatches of yesterday was the following: WASHINGTON, July 18.—Francis Schlatter, known as a "divine healer," was arrested today on complaint of the Central Union mission authorities for creating a disturbance in the rooms of the mission. He was charged with vagrancy. It is said that steps will be taken to examine into his mental condition.

It was a year or so after the real Schlatter left his bones beating on the sands of Arizona that the man who assumed his name attracted attention in the east. Unlike the poor demented man who attracted such wide-spread attention in New Mexico and Colorado, and who refused to accept money for "healing," this man McLean was in the business strictly for what there was in it.

If the original Schlatter died in Arizona, and the impostor McLean is in jail in Washington, who is the man who is now staying at the American Hotel?

Whether he may be, it is certain that should he hold meetings here there will be a great deal of interest taken in him, for the very appearance of the man with long dark hair hanging to his waist, and whiskers, which a small sized hurricane might blow will without doubt create a sensation.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES. Testimony in the Case of the Schooner Roland v. The Pawnee, Taken This Morning.

In the admiralty court this morning, before Judge McLeod, testimony was taken in the case of the schooner Roland against the steamer Pawnee. It is an action for damages resulting from collision. The damages amount to over $8,000. The steamer will be released on bail of $9,500. C. J. Coster, K. C., is acting for the steamer people and H. H. McLean, K. C., for the schooner.

John Cartwright, master of the Pawnee, testified that about noon on the 17th inst. they were about northwest of the automatic buoy. There was a high southeast wind, and it was very foggy. They were N. W. by W. when he saw the schooner Roland 100 yards distant, proceeding at the rate of 2-1/2 knots per hour. Witness was on the bridge with Pilot Richard Cline from half-past eight to 9 o'clock. The schooner was blowing and the chief officer and a sailor were on the lookout. When he saw the schooner he gave orders to have the engines stopped, by the time they struck the schooner on the starboard bow. He had a hawser thrown to the schooner, but her captain said she was sinking and ordered the hawser cut.

Griffith Jones, who had been on the Pawnee for five years, was called. He was on the lookout and heard the schooner's fog horn at the time of the collision. There was a dense fog at the time. He sang out that there was a vessel dead ahead. They were going very slowly. They struck the schooner almost the instant they saw her. Antonio Mosca was the next witness called. He testified that he was on the lookout with the mate at the time of the collision. There was a slight breeze and it was very foggy. He could see about two ship lengths ahead. He heard fog horns first about ten minutes before the accident. The second time he heard it was when the schooner was about half a length away. He was listening for the horns. Cross-examined by Mr. McLean he said he went on the lookout about a quarter of an hour before the accident. From eight until ten he was at the wheel, the steamer was running about two miles an hour. The steamer did not go any slower after the fog horns were heard.

Capt. Cartwright was then recalled and testified as to the telegraph and the log. The court adjourned until 2.15.

The New York Dock company, with a capital of $20,000,000 and owning about two and a half miles of water front, from the Brooklyn dock to Red Hook, will build a new dock and station with greater facilities than anything of the kind now existing in the United States.

PRAYER FOR RAIN. During his address at St. David's church last evening Dr. J. A. Morison referred to an editorial comment in one of the morning papers about the day of prayer which had been participated in by those suffering from heat in Kansas. Dr. Morison pointed out how foolish it was for people to laugh at those who prayed for deliverance from trouble as the help consists in communion with the Father and the assurance comes with prayer that God's will is over best.
