

NEW BRUNSWICK PROCEEDS AT KINGS ENCAENIA

EIGHTY-THREE PER CENT OF THE GRADUATES OF KING'S IN KHAKI

Remarkable Record of Ancient University—Honorary Degree of Doctor of Civil Law Conferred on Archdeacon Forsyth, Rev. Canon Wilson and M. G. Teed, K. C.—Inspiring Sermons by Rev. Canon Armstrong and Rev. G. F. Scovil of St. John.

Special to The Standard.
Windsor, N. S., May 2.—New Brunswick figured very prominently in the closing exercises of King's College University here today. At Christ Church this morning Canon Armstrong of St. John delivered one of the most practical and forcible sermons ever heard within the walls of the holy edifice. The alumna address at the conclusion of conferring the degrees this afternoon was also delivered by a New Brunswicker, Rev. G. F. Scovil of West St. John. The following in order were the degrees by the chancellor, Sir Charles Townshend, and the order of the day's programme:

- The Degrees.
- D. D. in Course—Rev. H. St. G. Butrum, B. D., St. John's Coll. U. of Man.; Rev. R. F. Lau, B. D. G. T. S.

CHILDREN HAD WHOOPING COUGH

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

Whooping coughs start with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucus and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's is 25c. and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont."

the royal charter, there may have been something in the name King's, there may have been something in the daily service where prayer was offered for the King, but whatever was the secret, to send eighty-three per cent of the undergraduates to the great every branch of our far flung battle activities you will find a man from King's, and when the history of the universities of this country comes to be written, it will be seen that King's has well filled its place in our national life.

"Again King's has a faculty of theology and it must be prominent in lengthening of foreign missionary efforts.

Foreign Missions.

"I would lay the chiefest stress on this point. I may be wrong, and I hope I am, but I have heard of no graduate of King's in this foreign field. My friends, this thing is crucial. It is vital if the church in North Africa was doomed because it ignored missions. If the church to-day finds its mission in the world, it is true that any theological college, which sends no graduates to the mission field will have a feeble and weakened existence. With all that I care not how it is accomplished, whether by a faculty of missions, by silent influence, by prayer, or by any means whatever, let us strive to send King's men out into the foreign field. Let us see to it that another encaenia, passes King's men will be in the front line Christian missions.

Strengthen Our Stakes.

"But the call for King's is two-fold and we must strengthen our stakes. To this end we must create a well instructed public opinion towards King's among the church people of the maritime provinces. Slowly but surely we must do it, for it is by no means the work of a moment. We must endeavor to have an educational Sunday in all our churches and that in view of the fact that the clergy with information, information as up to date, for in this connection it is well to forget the past. And our funds should come from the whole constituency. Again it is not easy. Strengthening stakes is humdrum work. Where possible local committees might be formed to help. As people are instructed the longer it continues the easier it will be if we are faithful. Interest in King's, like interest in everything else, must be felt. If people get no interest in the interest dies and their subscription perishes with it."

of the legal profession and the men of science with I am sure, he relieved to learn that I wish to meet my message to the members of that school about which I might be supposed to have a special interest, and perhaps known at least a little divinity.

"Under this head divinity it has become the custom to place all subjects which have specially to do with the training for the ministry, and in the case of this university with the training for the ministry of the Church of England in Canada. So with our text in mind, manhood, and proceed to consider the training of men for the ministry.

"In running over the subjects set forth of course we quite rightly mention the Bible studies of course in its different aspects, church history, dogmatics, liturgics, apologetics, homiletics, patristics, pastora, theology, ecclesiastical polity, moral theology, and eloquence and reading, by the way no music, almost everything but the one he shall in future have chiefly to deal with—man."

Curious Creature.

"This man is a curious, unreasonable creature—a man as we find him in many of our fields. I know, for instance, some districts where a man may appear who is D. D. after his name if he cannot hide his ignorance of the horse and his accoutrements he will soon be called upon to seek work elsewhere. It is not the man of the animal man might have carried through his difficulty. Knowledge is not very fruitful unless we can get it into operation. But some one who does not in constant touch with his kind, and does not acquire thereby a sufficient knowledge of the subject to serve him in the exercise of his ministry? He certainly acquires a wonderful knowledge, a practical knowledge of man, or at least of those men with whom he comes in contact—men of men of other walks in life. But even his experimental knowledge is an unsatisfactory knowledge. It would be something like the knowledge of a supposed medical student who gains of the body and its disease."

Many Advantages.

"He would continue much like the unscientific farmer with a sort of hit and miss method, making probably far more mistakes than successes. The King's offers many advantages, but the only one which usually endures to the day of graduation. He has a manly nature as he pursues his way through the day of graduation. He is throughout his life, and in many cases at least in our day, rooms with men who are looking forward to other experience. And on account of this profession, and on account of this experience out of these mischievous persons generally known as the "ecclesiastical prig." Being other than a prig, I do mean the logical, the logical, the narrowness, which usually endures the life of such institutions, there too is not missing in the life of this university the discipline of the devotional life for the student. It appears to me, why the Bible has been preserved is to give us the steps of development in the life of a wonderful race, the people themselves are kept ever in the foreground. We note for instance the development of the religious instinct in Israel. History shows how it was led so much with the idea of accumulated mere facts, in that case it would resolve for the student into the dry bone."

Philosophy.

"This will fall under the head of philosophy. There are great courses given in this subject, but there is not time enough given to it. We readily admit that as a science it is only in its infancy nevertheless. Quite enough has been developed to form a basis for the student to begin to work upon. When he goes out from these walls he should certainly be conversant with the best that has been said in the world. He should know the divisions of child and adult life and the general rules for dealing with such and dealing with such under all average circumstances. We don't know how to bring results of his mistakes upon the church."

"Pastoral theology. We have classed this part of our suggestions under this head, although we feel it is worthy of independent consideration. When the man goes out and takes up his ministry, he is almost immediately face to face with the great problems or wrongs of society. And if he has not been taught how to cope with them, he has to bungle along and learn through bitter experience. It is not fair, it is not right to send him thus so poorly equipped out into the world to bring results of his mistakes upon the church."

with Messrs. Frey and Bremer had gone to a wine house to celebrate Mr. Frey's birthday. In the conversation Mr. Bremer stated his mother country, Denmark, had two bitter enemies—Germany and England. At last Mr. Bremer said—"I would like to see the English army beaten." Mr. Evans further stated that Mr. Bremer had also said that Germany was only fighting for her rights. Mr. Frey corroborated all statements made by Mr. Evans.

"In answer Mr. Bremer said he had not made the remarks in a sceditious way—that he merely expressed an opinion in the presence of old friends that from childhood he had been taught that Denmark had the enmity of the two nations and that he therefore could not have a preference for either."

Offers His Resignation.

"Asked directly if he had said the things charged, Mr. Bremer made evasive replies. Before leaving my office he made the following statement: "We have no Allies as Congress has not decreed any allies. We are fighting for our own cause. I stated that England has not been faithful to this country. England has been a great enemy of this country for years."

"He then offered his resignation, requesting that I assist him in keeping the matter from becoming public and asking that he be permitted to modify his testimony. This I refused to do."

JOSEPH M. WEBER DECLARES CHARGES OF DISLOYALTY WERE PROVEN BY 2 WITNESSES.

The charges of conspiracy made by Alexander Bremer, who has been suspended as president of the Musical Mutual Protective Union, of New York, and dropped from the membership of the organization for alleged disloyalty, remains as he was said to have made were answered yesterday by Joseph M. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, of which the Musical Protective Union is a local.

In a formal statement Mr. Weber says the action expelling Mr. Bremer was taken after thorough investigation and the allegations were found to be substantially true. The statement follows in part:—

"A rumor reached the American Federation of Musicians April 7 that Mr. Bremer had made disloyal remarks. Frank Evans (secretary of the Musical Protective Union) and Max Frey (assistant secretary at arms), were named as the men to whom the remarks had been made. All three were summoned to the office and questioned before a stenographer.
