

MURDER CHARGE.

W. T. Trewocky Arrested in Bucksport, Me., Charged With Killing Sarah Ware in September

Bucksport, Me., March 13.—The first active move in the sensational Ware murder was made here this forenoon when W. T. Trewocky, proprietor of a general repair store here, was arrested, charged with the killing of the woman.

In September last Mrs. Sarah Ware, aged 50, living with an old woman named Miles in the outskirts of Bucksport, disappeared from home. Until she had been away for two weeks even this was unknown to the officers.

Two days after the search was begun her body was found in a lonely pasture, a quarter of a mile from her home. Her head was apparently badly crushed, but decomposition had obscured many evidences that might have led to the detection of the murderer.

All sorts of stories and theories were advanced and more multiplied as time went on. Detectives came from other towns and engaged on the case, but for many weeks nothing developed.

At last the town almost gave up hope of ever finding the murderer. At this point a mass meeting was called and a committee was appointed to conduct a further investigation, at the same time offering a reward of $500 for evidence that would lead to an arrest and conviction.

Detective Dennis Tracy of Bangor began work upon the case early in October. He has worked straight through the winter on what seemed to him to be good material, and recently secured the interest of Atty. Gen. William P. Haines of Waterville.

Acting on the evidence found the attorney general came here yesterday afternoon and met Judge E. E. Chase of the western Hancock municipal court, and in the evening a long consultation was held with the citizens committee and Mr. Tracey. County Attorney John E. Barker of Bar Harbor arrived on the morning train.

No one in Bucksport except the citizens committee knew that the officials were coming to town, and their arrival caused a great stir. People remained on the streets until nearly midnight talking about the case and wondering what was to be done.

This forenoon when the arrest was made and it became generally known people came to town from miles around to hear the gossip and get further information.

It was a few minutes after 9 o'clock when Deputy Sheriff Genn, accompanied by Detective Tracey, went to Trewocky's place of business and arrested him on a warrant sworn out by S. L. Heywood of the citizens committee and Judge Chase. The prisoner was taken to the Robinson house and there placed in charge of an officer.

He was perfectly cool, and at no time during the day did he show any sign of weakening under the ordeal of the examinations and even direct accusations which he faced from the beginning.

was frightened. I do not remember the day this happened." Cross-examined: "I am married and have a child; went coasting when I first came here, and in the summer of 1897 I was with Capt. A. Dorr. Cannot write or figure. Think it was the very night I got home from Rockport that I went with Trewocky. It was 9:55 when I returned from going with him after the body. Was so frightened that I did not sleep that night."

"I went a week without mentioning it to any person. Then I told mother about it. We went to the Grand jury, and there I told Joe Mink, who is now in state prison, about it."

Detective Dennis Tracy, a postal clerk between Bangor and Bangor, who has manifested great interest in the case since the beginning, testified that he was asked to join the citizens committee in the hunt for the murderer.

The witness testified about interviewing other people about the case, and said that he had never charged any person as being guilty of the crime.

Detective Dennis Tracy was the last witness of the afternoon. He told about his working up the case and of the visit he made to Trewocky's place on Nov. 15, with detective Fred Odlin of Lewiston.

"We found in the Cottage house there," said the witness, "a hammer under the cushion of the wagon, and a piece of canvas 10 feet long and five feet wide with stains on it that looked like blood."

Other friendly powers—the minister continued—were then notified and indicated their acquiescence. He expressed his confidence in the ultimate success of Italy's policy and reminded the chamber that Italy's duty in Europe, before the war, was to be a mediator, not a party to the war.

Admiral Canevaro then covered evens already known, explaining that Signor Martino's action had been disapproved because his ultimate interest was in the event of Sir Claude MacDonald, British minister at Peking, being unable to return to Europe, he would have to take back Signor Martino's first note, should Italy resume liberty of action in the East.

Many of the Italian princes have a great deal of money, and some of them have married white wives, but they are all of color, and anything but a white man for a husband revolts the American stomach. Many of them, like the Maharajah of Kapurthala, have been brought up in England and have evinced a preference for Caucasian wives. I believe it was Mrs. George Law whom His Highness of Kapurthala wanted to marry. Some of them have succeeded in marrying into the British aristocracy. Prince Duplek Singh married the pretty daughter of the beautiful Lady Cornwallis.

San Francisco, March 14.—Elihu Wilbur, long asleep, it seems, is about to come to an end, not through the door that leads into the eternal valley of shadow, but back to the scenes of this world.

The girl who for 13 months has laid in a heavy stupor not unlike death, is showing signs of consciousness, and the doctors, who have given her up over and over again, now believe she will recover.

THE EASTERN SITUATION.

CHINA BLUE BOOK—ITALY AND HER DEMANDS.

London, March 14.—The eagerly anticipated China blue book was issued this evening, but all the main points in despatches, filling 360 pages and covering the period from February, 1898, to February, 1899, were already known to the public.

The blue book deals at length with all the territorial, railway and mining concessions to all countries, commencing with the cession of Port Arthur and closing with the opening of Nan Ning as a trading port to the British.

The readiness of British warships to support the question of the foreign concession at Shanghai, the exhibits including the protest against the placing of American property under the jurisdiction of France or any other single power.

Other friendly powers—the minister continued—were then notified and indicated their acquiescence. He expressed his confidence in the ultimate success of Italy's policy and reminded the chamber that Italy's duty in Europe, before the war, was to be a mediator, not a party to the war.

and this was done and Gibbons was taken to the police court. Recorder Goff caused Gibbons to be brought before him and quickly discharged him from arrest. The recorder scored the district attorney's office who had effected the arrest, intimating that he might punish him for contempt of court. The recorder said to Officer Palmer, the man in question: "The district attorney has no more right to tell you and you have no more right to do than you have to go out and kill a man at his request. It is an outrage."

General Otis Forbade Negotiations Respecting Surrender.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—General Otis in forbidding further negotiations between the Spanish at Manila and the insurgents, touching the surrender of the Spanish prisoners held by the latter, acted on his own authority. The government had not sent him any instructions upon this point, but it will unquestionably support him, to the extreme in any action of the kind he may take.

THE POWER OF A SONG.

ANNE M. SMITH. In the midst of a rough and careless crowd In the busy city street, The old musician, with grayflecked bow, Made music grand and sweet.

With his violin lovingly held to his breast, Unconscious of all beside, His strains bore peace to the heart oppress, And the rude ceased to deride. And one young man was moved to tears, And turned away from the throng; He had wandered from home for many years, And the familiar song.

Awoke in his heart thoughts of that home From which he had exiled himself; Over the wide, cold world to roam, And his mother's pleadings spurred. As the uncurtained window streaming Out on the dark, cold night, His sweet, true-hearted sister fair Fell the cottage light.

Strains of music caught his ear, The heartleek, wandering boy; And, as he eagerly drew near, His sorrow turned to joy. For, seated at the organ there, Thinking of him that did roam, His sweet, true-hearted sister fair Was singing his welcome home. The song the old musician played Beyond the ocean's foam, "Of Willie we have missed you, Welcome to our ocean home." Lower Kintore, Victoria Co.

GRAZED BY LOVE.

Good Looking Young Woman Tries to Die Beneath Engine's Wheels.

New York, March 14.—Her reason recently destroyed by some tragic love affair, a comely young woman tried to fling herself in front of an elevated train from the station at One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Eighth avenue this morning. As she ran toward the tracks she sobbed: "Oh, Jimmy, why did you go?"

The ticket chopper and several others near by seized her and dragged her, struggling and sobbing, back from the edge of the platform. She tried again and again to free herself. An ambulance from the J. Hood Wright Hospital was sent for. Dr. Gault, the ambulance surgeon, pronounced the woman violently insane. She had destroyed her reason by brooding over some great trouble.

INJURED MAN DIES.

Gideon Wilcox Does Not Recover Consciousness.

ATTLEBORO, March 14.—Gideon E. Wilcox, who was found in South Attleboro late Friday night with his skull fractured, died this morning. From the time he was picked up until his death he did not regain consciousness. The police were anxious to have him come out of the stupor in order to ascertain if there was any ground for the suspicion of foul play. As stated in the paper yesterday, the railroad men told there is good reason to suspect foul play, as they are positive if the man had been struck by a car the motorman would have known about it.

BODY IN A BROOK.

Italian Found Drowned at Boylston—How He Was Drowned? WORCESTER, March 14.—The dead body of a man, evidently an Italian, was found this morning in a brook at Sawyer's Mills, Boylston. The body was taken to Clinton. Medical Examiner G. L. Tobey found no indication of foul play. The brook in which the body was found is a small one, and it does not appear probable that the man drowned himself.
